Thousands March To Ring Pentagon

WASHINGTON (AP)—Thousands of youthful anti-war demonstrators marched on the Pentagon today after hearing attacks on President Johnson and his Vietnam policy.

Benjamin Spock, pediatrician and author, labelled Johnson as "the enemy" at a huge pre-march rally at the Lincoln Memorial and protest leader David Dellinger said the American people are against the war.

Crowd estimates ranged from 20,000 by the District of Columbia police department to 37,000 by the National Capital Park Police to Dellinger's 150,000 to 210,000.

Most were college age, bearded and blue-jeaned, and they combined a carnival atmosphere with applause for the speeches before starting out on the 1½-mile walk to the defence department headquarters building across the Potomac River.

One brief melee upset the otherwise non-violent assembly.

Police, soldiers and other reinforcement units were on hand in heavy numbers to hold down any violence.

A pair of anti-demonstrators rushed through the crowd as the program got under way and charged the speakers' stand.

A youth wearing a black leather jacket knocked over the speaker's rostrum before demonstration leaders corralled him.

The speaker, British union leader Clive Jenkins, was knocked off his feet in the scuffle.

By 2 p.m. police arrested five persons—the two anti-demonstrators, a third who police said also made a rush on the speaker's stand, a demonstrator who tangled with them and a man protesting the rally who refused police admonitions to get out of the way when the program began.

Dellinger, 52, chairman of the sponsoring National Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam, told the crowd the peace movement had entered "a new stage of active resistance" and said "our voices will be heard and our bodies will be heeded."

●

By noon, police had taken four persons into custody. Two of those arrested were youths who rushed the speakers' stand. They were detained by police after one of them knocked over a microphone. Another was a demonstrator who had battled the pair.

A fourth man arrested was a uniformed, bemedaled serviceman who refused police orders to leave the memorial area where he was protesting the rally.

Dellinger said the Vietnam conflict was the most unpopular war in U.S. history and described President Johnson as a "martyr to principle who, damn it all, is going to go ahead with the war even if the American people are against it."

Dellinger announced an estimated 100,000 were present "with others still coming in." The two youths who stormed the speakers' stand ran from a point in the crowd where a student waved a sign saying "Go to hell with the Red clergy—let's start the fight against the Communist menace."

The youthful crowd—many long-haired and in casual clothes—surrounded the reflecting pool in front of the memorial and extended as far back as the slopes at the foot of the Washington Monument.

Protests Sound Around World

By UPI

Hundreds of thousands of anti-Vietnam war demonstrators marched and chanted in European and Asian cities today in a day of international solidarity with the huge Washington rally protesting U.S. policy in Southeast Asia.

U.S embassies and other American installations abroad were key targets of many leftist marchers.

Some of the biggest demonstrations took place in Japan where the national police agency said a total of 200,000 persons participated in marches and rallies in 367 localities throughout the nation.

An estimated 60,000 union members staged a big anti-war rally in Tokyo where about 3,000 leftists marched around the U.S. embassy, shouting "Yankee, go home." Police arrested 11 of the Tokyo demonstrators.

In Europe leftist-led demonstrations hit London, Paris, Dublin, Stockholm, Oslo, Amsterdam, Frankfurt, Moscow, Berlin and Munich. Smaller demonstrations were reported elsewhere in Europe.

In one of Western Europe's biggest shows of anti-American strength, 20,000 Frenchmen and a handful of Americans and Vietnamese marched to the Place de la Republique—a traditional site of May Day demonstrations in Paris.

Trains Rolling to Expo As Transit Strike Over

MONTREAL (CP) — Subway trains began rolling to Expo 67 at 12:45 p.m. EDT today, heralding the first big break in Montreal's month-long transit strike.

A spokesman for the Confederation of National Trade Unions, which represents the strikers said the unions would not place anything in the way of subway and bus crews returning to work.

"The law is the law," he said referring to the legislation passed in Quebec City early today ordering the 6,000 employees of the Montreal Transportation Commission back to work.

An Expo operations officer said the first subway train began dropping its passengers at the St. Helen's Island station within the world's fair at 12:45 p.m.

He expected that buses would be running an hour or so later to Expo. Buses on other routes in the city began running at about 12:40 p.m.

For Expo, the break came like a happy ending to a drawn-out cliff hanger. Officials had been prepared to cope with possibly the worst congestion yet seen in this final full weekend of the world exposition.

NEEDED SERVICE

The reported break came two days after Philippe de Gaspe Beaubien, Expo operations chief, told a press conference that all Expo needs to reach an attendance of 50,000,000 visitors is the restoration of subway service.

Service on the two other subway lines was expected to resume later in the day. The MTC had said it would give top priority to restoration of service on the line connecting downtown Montreal to Expo and the south shore of the St. Lawrence River.

LEGISLATION AVERTED

Radiologists Back

QUEBEC (CP) — Last-minute agreement was reached Friday between the provincial government and Quebec's radiologists averting planned legislation to force the X-ray specialists back to work.

Premier Daniel Johnson said the radiologists had told him they would return to the hospitals "with or without contract."

The government had planned to introduce a back-to-work bill in a special session that also was called to deal with the Montreal transit strike.

There are 208 registered radiologists in the province and they began resigning in early August in protest over government attitudes to the extension of hospital insurance coverage to private clinics.

The radiologists and the provincial health department clashed over the amount of control the department should have in private radiology clinics receiving public money.

In his Friday statement the premier said agreement now has been reached that only welfare cases will be eligible for coverage in private clinics under the hospital insurance act.

Unions Fail To Mount Big Protest

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Quebec Bureau

QUEBEC CITY — The confederation of National Trade Unions failed Friday in an attempt to mount a massive demonstration against a bill ordering striking Montreal bus drivers back to work.

The bill became law early today, giving Montreal Transportation Commission employees 48 hours to go back to work or face prison terms, stiff fines and possible decertification of their unions.

The Liberal opposition voted against the bill after the government defeated an amendment that would have eliminated clauses threatening unions with loss of certification if their members defy the law.

BARRICADES ERECTED

More than 300 provincial police officers were on duty at the legislature Friday and barricades were set up to hold back the promised thousands of demonstrators that the CNTU had announced would march on the legislature.

Barely 1,000 militants showed up Friday evening.

And although a handful of them periodically chanted "revolution," the farthest they got in that direction was an unsuccessful attempt to burn down two young trees.

A few liquor bottles were thrown, after being emptied, over the heads of the police cordon that held the demonstrators back from the legislature doors.

When a handful of the more militant members of the demonstration proposed invading the legislature, CNTU president Marcel Pepin called his followers away to a meeting in the Quebec Coliseum.

That meeting was cut short after the gasoline tank of a policeman's motorcycle was set alight outside the Coliseum.

They Now Can Enjoy Good Book

The chance to sit back and enjoy a good book—whether a novel or a history book—is something blind persons don't always have.

The chance to enjoy the book with someone else is an even rarer pleasure. But a few persons with a few dollars to spare can put a reader in a blind person's home.

The reader—a cartridge-loaded tape machine—is one of many Canadian National Institute for the Blind services partially supported by the United Appeal.

The CNIB received 4.7 per cent of donations to the Appeal last year.

The book readers—each of which costs the CNIB $150 to place on permanent loan in a home—is only one of the many services provided.

Jack Hoskins, who took over as field representative of the Vancouver Island district of the CNIB a month ago, says there are about 475 blind persons in the district to look after.

The CNIB offers them everything from home training in handicrafts to placement in jobs.

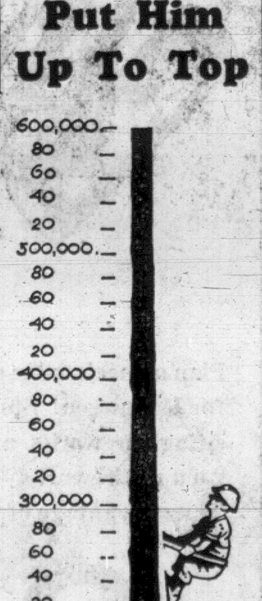
A home teacher goes on regular visits to 40 persons in Victoria to offer instruction in reading Braille, typing, basketry, knitting and other crafts.

They are supplied with materials at cost and the CNIB sells what they make from its building in Victoria and through stores in the city.

And their activities never end—Mr. Hoskins said he is always after new ways to employ the blind.

United Appeal

Put Him Up To Top



Official audited collection of the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal this morning stood at $255,261 or 42.5 per cent of the $600,000 target.

Secret Talks Open On Rhodesian Crisis

PRETORIA (Reuters) — Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith flew here today for secret talks on the Rhodesian independence crisis with Prime Minister John Vorster of South Africa.

The two leaders were due to confer later today at Vorster's official home in Pretoria.

Smith's flight provided the first direct evidence that South Africa is going to play a front-rank role in trying to settle the Rhodesian-British dispute.

The meeting lent strength to suggestions in diplomatic quarters here that the South African government has been asked by Britain to try to persuade the Rhodesians to come to terms.

South African Foreign Minister Hilgard Muller met British Prime Minister Wilson and Foreign Secretary George Brown during a recent visit to London.

The search continued today for the body of a Nanaimo youth who drowned Thursday.

He was one of four who died in Tetachuck Lake, 90 miles southwest of Vanderhoof.

David had been working since spring at a lodge on Tetachuk Lake.

Police said the four lost their lives when their 22-foot boat overturned. The lone survivor was Al Smith of Fort St. John.

SANITY TESTS URGED FOR LEADERS

Long Trips a Danger?

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters)——An Australian doctor has suggested that the World Psychiatric Association form a committee to check the mental health of world leaders.

Dr. Oscar Schmalzbach, psychiatric consultant to the New South Wales attorney-general's department, made the suggestion in a letter to the Medical Journal of Australia.

He said that politicians who attended top-level conferences after long, wearying flights could endanger world peace.

Politicians flown to conferences to meet international emergencies were not given time to readjust their mental and physical equilibrium, he said.

"This may be one of the reasons, probably an important one, for the sad state of world affairs," Dr. Schmalzbach said.

THIS ROUND GOES TO OTTAWA

Bennett on the Ropes But Still Smiling

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

Mika

Any week that sees Ottawa belt Premier Bennett around like a punching bag has to go down as somewhat unusual.

The haymakers usually are thrown by Mr. Bennett but the federal government came back with some pretty painful counterpunching this past week.

Although he grit his teeth into a fixed smile to show he wasn't hurt, it obviously took an effort.

The hardest blow of all was Transport Minister Paul Hellyer's torpedoing of the provincial super-port proposed for Roberts Bank to make way for an even bigger federal installation.

Mr. Bennett undoubtedly will remind everyone that B.C. originally asked Ottawa to undertake the project — but he hardly expected the federal government to do it without even telling him before the newspapers.

That's the sort of treatment Ottawa takes from him instead of the other way around but Mr. Bennett shouldn't be too surprised — as admiral of the ferry fleet he should have paid more attention to the slugging power Mr. Hellyer showed when the navy's brass took him on.

Another blow appeared imminent in the revelation that Prime Minister Pearson had used his office's prestige to persuade Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes to stay at his post for another extension.

This can be expected to clear the way for federal Labor Minister John Nicholson to resign early next year and succeed Mr. Pearkes.

It virtually dooms chances that Kelowna businessman and Mr. Bennett's preferred choice. Bruce Smith will get the appointment, as he was expected to if Mr. Pearkes retired as scheduled at the end of this month.

◆

(The delay will enable Mr. Nicholson to quit in Vancouver-Centre close enough to a general election expected next fall that no byelection will be necessary. Thus Liberal MP Ron Basford will be able to switch smoothly to colleague's riding when his own Vancouver-Burrard disappears under the redistribution rules.)

Prime Minister Pearson's call in Banff for an equal break for French-Canadians everywhere in the country also forced Premier Bennett into reveiling his until-now-undeclared opposition to French language schools.

◆

His bitter tone would indicate the premier realized he was leading with his chin when he told everyone that bilingualism is too high a price to pay for Confederation, but he couldn't dodge the issue any longer. Time will tell how many Canadians in British Columbia will pay him back at the polling booths.

And Mr. Bennett was so vehement as to approach hysteria in his denunciations of the federal government's tardy admissions that belt-tightening and tight money are here to stay for a while.

In all probability, this will hurt him most of all as interest rates continue climbing while he borrows still hundreds of millions of dollars more for the power projects which he boasted would produce cheap electricity. All the construction wizardry in the world won't pare costs now if B.C. Hydro bonds yield 6 or 7 per cent.

Mr. Bennett is bitterly aware that the mighty W. A. C. Bennett Dam could become a tomb for his reputation rather than a monument if this province is driven into financial difficulty because of his two-river policy.

And the high interest rates have scared him more on another front too — their effect on the housing crisis in the province.

He has always maintained that it was the aroused women voters angered by the hospitalization premiums that put him into office. Little wonder that he's running scared now that aroused women are stalking government corridors to berate him over housing shortages.

It wouldn't be surprising if all his remonstrances that it is federal financial policy that dries up mortgage funds fails to convince voters who have believed his past boasts Social Credit was so dynamic it could overcome any problem.

He has another propaganda problem in his war with Ottawa. A lot of people will shrug and say its a case of the kettle calling the pot black when he complains the federal government is hitting him below the belt.

◆

But there's one area in which I think Ottawa has seriously overstepped the line — it's joy over the Supreme Court of Canada's interpretation that the federal Juvenile Delinquents Act is criminal law and therefore takes precedence over any provincial statutes.

Spokesmen for the federal government apparently argue that the B.C. government was not thinking of children's welfare at all but trying backhardedly to usurp central authority when it told magistrates to allow prosecution of traffic cases under the Motor Vehicles Act instead of the juvenile Act.

◆

Yet this was the recommendation of the Canadian Welfare Council five years ago, made because it would eliminate the criminal record created for a youth when convicted under the fedral act of however minor an offence.

The Ottawa pundits suggest that it's true that youngsters would be better off under the B.C. experiment in non-serious cases but they would lose the protections of the closed-court provided by the federal act when charged with serious offences.

This specious suggestion falls instantly when one remembers that there is no provincial legislation covering serious offences — they're all dealt with under the federal Criminal Code.

For instance, a child could break a provincial traffic regulation—like speeding but could not break a provincial law against robbery — because there is none.

Protection of children in serious offences never was the issue — only the elimination of a senseless criminal record for infraction of regulations which are not crimes.

The Supreme Court gave literal meaning to the law passed by Parliament as it had to, even though this particular one gives point to the saying "the law is an ass".

Ottawa's backroom boys would be better employed making some sensible changes to help children rather than gloating when they're hurt just because it means B.C. lost a court case.

'Canada First' Hellyer Stand

VANCOUVER (CP) — Transport Minister Hellyer said Friday he has taken a "hard line" stand on an all-Canadian rail route for British Columbia coal to be exported to Japan.

He said in an interview that it is necessary in the Canadian interest to see that Canadian facilities and labor are used in the proposed multi-million dollar coal sale.

He made the statement after his announcement Thursday that the federal government is prepared to spend up to $50,000,000 for port facilities to handle large bulk carriers at Roberts Bank, 10 miles south of here.

The development was proposed by the provincial government to end a stalemate last year over shipping coal from a Crows Nest Industries Ltd. mine near Fernie in southeastern B.C. for Japanese steel mills.

Crows Nest said Canadian Pacific Railway freight rates to Vancouver were too high and proposed building a spur line from the mine to the Great Northern Railway in the United States. The coal would then be shipped via the U.S. to Roberts Bank

KAISER NEGOTIATIONS

The company also has an agreement to sell its coal operations to Kaiser Steel Corp. of California, but the deal must be completed by Jan. 30.

The CNI-Kaiser interests still are negotiating the coal contract, reported to involve 3,000,000 tons over 15 years, with Japanese interests.

Mr. Hellyer said the CPR "has offered a competitive rate in my opinion and this should enable Crows Nest to get a contract."

CPR President Ian Sinclair said in Montreal that he was pleased Mr. Hellyer wants the Canadian route.

"It should be made very clear that we have been the only railway to give the Kaiser-CNI people a firm rate to haul the coal to the coast," he said. "The GNR rate has been conditional."

Work on the Roberts Bank superport is expected to begin in the early 1970s, Mr. Hellyer said.

Under the development, the National Harbors Board would build three giant earth-filled wharfs. The first phase, costing an estimated $10,000,000, would be an expansion of B.C. government ferry facilities plus rail connections.

FIFTH IMPAIRED CONVICTION

A month in jail and a three-year licence suspension was imposed today on Harry Kamai, 1257 Craigflower, when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

His record showed he had four previous convictions for impaired driving and one for driving while intoxicated since 1951.

He was arrested after he started to back his car out of the Gorge Hotel parking lot and hit another car.

Fined $250 and given a six-month licence suspension, except for business purposes, was Richard N. Little, 1804 Fernwood, who pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

He was involved in a rear end collision at Bay and Rose Friday evening.

. . . MARCH ON PENTAGON

The crowd waiting for the rally to open was quiet and orderly, sitting in small groups or wandering idly.

The stated objective of the demonstrators — in addition to publicizing their anti-war stand —is to bring Pentagon activities to a halt.

There was one arrest before the demonstration got under way—a uniformed, bemedaled serviceman protesting the rally. When he refused to move from the memorial area as police ordered, officers hustled him off to jail.

President Johnson meanwhile remained in the White House several blocks from the memorial. Police barred pedestrians from using the Pennsylvania Avenue sidewalk in front of the White House and neighboring Executive Office Building.

A Pentagon spokesman said plans called for "business as usual" in the defence department headquarters building. Defence Secretary Robert S. MacNamara arrived as usual at 8 a.m.

A justice department official warned that the permit for the demonstration against the Vietnam war "is not a licence for unlawful conduct."

A week-long effort by anti-draft demonstrators in California to paralyse the Oakland induction centre ended Friday when 10,000 turned out.

On the east coast students demonstrated at Brooklyn College and Columbia University in New York and in two Massachusetts communities.

As the intensity of the protest grew so did plans for counter-demonstrations in support of the war.

In New York, veterans groups, unions and fraternal organizations prepared for a two-day vigil in Battery Park on the tip of lower Manhattan and parades were scheduled for Sunday.

The National Student Committee for Victory in Vietnam urged a "lights-on" demonstration for motorists today to signal support for the U.S. troops in Vietnam.

Charles W. Wiley, executive secretary of the National Committee for Responsible Patriotism, released letters from Richard M. Nixon and Barry Goldwater endorsing the demonstrations in support of the U.S. servicemen.

Several small bus companies in New York refused to use their vehicles as charters to carry peace demonstrators from New York to Washington for today's rally.

To insure that today's demonstrators in Washington remain peaceful, the government flew in 6,000 troops — and word was that another 20,000 were at the ready.

Dellinger said the demonstrators had been warned not to be provocative but added, "I would be foolish to think there are no people coming in who are not total pacifists."

Demonstrators in Oakland hooted and jeered, pelting police with cans and picket signs. Trash cans and automobiles were used to form temporary barricades but police quickly took them down.

Brooklyn College, scene of a bloody clash between police and students Thursday, was virtually shut down in some departments as students called a strike Friday.

11 Dope Arrests

TORONTO (CP) — Police today arrested 11 persons on marijuana charges in the city's Yorkville district, bringing arrests in two days to 22. Eight were charged with trafficking in marijuana and another three with possession.

Ottawa Should Pay Says Premier

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bennett Friday accused the federal government, and not the United States, of being in default of payment of $12,000,000 to British Columbia under the Columbia River Treaty.

"Ottawa is in default and I use that word very strongly," said the premier in an interview. "The U.S. may owe the money to Ottawa but that's got nothing to do with Ottawa owing the money to us."

Bennett demanded immediate payment from Ottawa plus 6 per cent interest.

"I don't deal with Washington. I deal with Ottawa — it's their responsibility to pay this money immediately. I've waited long enough."

Under terms of the Columbia River Treaty between Canada and the United States, B.C. is owed $12,000,000 for early completion of the Duncan Dam, one of three storage dams being built by the province under the treaty.

The money, payment for flood control benefits, has been owed since July.

This system will move inland today and be in Alberta Sunday. Occasional rain will mark its passage through the interior and partial clearing along the coast will occur in its wake. However, a new storm building in the Pacific will reach the north coast Sunday morning and rain is expected over the lower mainland by evening.

Bonn Could Be U.K. Ace

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Chancellor Kiesinger of West Germany will have a rare political advantage when he meets Prime Minister Wilson on his first visit to Britain next week.

Wilson urgently needs his help to strengthen Britain's case for membership in the European Common Market.

Undoubtedly Kiesinger could extract a wealth of political favors if he gave this help. But he probably will let the opportunity pass. He shows no anxiety to disturb French President de Gaulle whose clear order to Britain is to keep its distance.

Indeed, relations between London and Paris appear to be getting a bit nasty.

Rumors in Britain that de Gaulle is seriously ill have been quickly squelched in Paris with the acid remark of Premier Pompidou that Britain undoubtedly will be glad to hear the good news that the president is in good health.

ECONOMY WEAKENING

The British economy is beginning to weaken again, as usually happens in autumn months, and Wilson is anxious to show more constructive progress towards his goal of European memberhsip. Because of its economic power, West Germany can play a key role.

If Kiesinger could be persuaded to support the position of the smaller Common Market members—loudly in favor of Britain—de Gaulle might be forced to moderate his position. Otherwise his partners could threaten to upset his agricultural and other proposals so vital for the volatile and politically-powerful French farming community.

But Kiesinger has already indicated he wants no part of this He is more apt to play along with de Gaulle and counsel patience to Wilson. After all, de Gaulle is 77.

There may be other reasons why Kiesinger appears cool to British entry. There are Bonn reports that the chancellor privately agrees with the Common Market commission's questioning of the real strength of sterling and expressed doubts about the basic strength of the British economy.

In hard political terms, Wilson will meet Kiesinger with his pockets virtually empty. He might privately express willingness to support West German foreign policy, especially in relation to German reunification and other sensitive issues, but Kiesinger has already publicly shown a softening line towards East Germany, East Europe and the Soviet Union.

In other days Wilson might also have hinted readiness to put in a good word for West Germany with U.S. President Johnson, utilizing the Anglo-American "special relationship." But, alas, Kiesinger's relations with Johnson seem to be just as strong as those Wilson has with the American leader.

And, of course, Kiesinger has something additional which Wilson appears unable to obtain—close relations with de Gaulle.

TV Campaigns Sharpest Ever

FREDERICTON (CP)—Broadcasting regulations put the politicians off the air waves at midnight Friday, ending the most intense radio and television political campaign ever held in New Brunswick.

The final shots of the campaign for Monday's provincial election will be fired from meeting-hall platforms throughout the province today and Sunday.

Rules laid down by the Board of Broadcast Governors prohibit radio and television campaigning within 48 hours of polling day.

As the deadline approached Friday night, the voices of both Liberal Premier Louis J. Robichaud and Progressive Conservative Leader J. C. Van Horne came through the speakers of radio and television sets in this province of 625,000, where more than 315,000 will be eligible to vote Monday.

Mr. Robichaud, in his last province-wide television address, promised "a responsible program to build New Brunswick," a program he described as calm, sensible and positive compared to PC promises which he described as "irresponsible."

Mr. Van Horne, speaking on a similar TV hook-up, said Mr. Robichaud had failed to hold a platform convention. He had merely "copied our program—too little too late."

RALLIES HELD

The two leaders held next-to-final rallies Friday night, Mr. Robichaud in Woodstock and Mr. Van Horne in Moncton, the PC leader received personal support at the Moncton rally from Manitoba Premier Duff Roblin.

Mr. Robichaud, who will be 42 today, directed his sharpest criticism at Mr. Van Horne's 113-point program. The Premier described the promises as "irresponsible."

Mr. Van Horne, who has said his role in public life must be to "crush the Robichaud dictatorship," has repeatedly charged the Liberals with uttering falsehoods.

Standing after the 1963 election was: Liberal 32, PC 20. Standing at dissolution: Liberal 31, PC 20 vacant one.

The election is the third in Canada this month.

In Saskatchewan Oct. 11, the Liberal government of Premier Ross Thatcher was re-elected with an increased majority.

In Ontario Oct. 17, Premier John Robarts' Conservatives were returned with a reduced majority.

Plane Hits School

SAN JOSE (Reuters) — A plane crashed into a school in this Costa Rican centre Friday and 400 students and 20 teachers escaped from the building uninjured seconds before the roof caved in. Two of the six persons aboard the plane suffered slight injuries.

Reject Compromise, Paris Envoy Told

PARIS (Reuters) — President de Gaulle has instructed his foreign minister to refuse any compromise formula for the proposed negotiations for British Common Market membership when foreign ministers of the six market members meet next week, government sources indicated today.

The French government's line at the talks—to be held in Luxembourg Monday and Tuesday—which hitherto had been kept secret, is expected to be as follows:

1. A thorough examination of the problems raised for the Common Market by the entry of Britain, Norway, Denmark and Ireland, to be carried out by the six without any contacts with the British government.

2. France would agree to this study not being dragged out indefinitely and would eventually accept Jan. 1 as the date for its completion.

3. France is opposed to any form of transition period or probationary membership for countries wanting to enter the European Economic Community.

In the case of Britain, the French government, it is understood will press the other five to accept the view that it is up to the British government itself to decide when it will be ready and completely adapted for full membership, and to become a full member then.

'Don't Expect Miracles' By New Consumer Branch

By GERALD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal department of corporate and consumer affairs will deal with a wide range of consumer issues but John Turner has told the public not to expect "magical, instant solutions."

The legislation to establish the department won approval in principle in the Commons Friday after four days of opposition attack and a strong defence by the 38-year-old registrar-general.

He promised that the department he will head will "pierce the corporate veil," using the Criminal Code, the Combines Investigation Act, the Food and Drug Act and other legislative tools to aid consumers.

"Our proposed legislation on drugs is an example of the way in which we can modify laws in order to help bring about lower prices." Mr. Turner said.

He added that his department already is examining complaints about the sale of hearing aids at "excessive prices."

Meanwhile a two-day supply debate is scheduled to begin Monday and both the Conservative and New Democratic parties have indicated they will move non-confidence motions.

The topic may be Cape Breton's troubles in the wake of an announcement by Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. that it will close down its Sydney, N.S., steel plant next April 30, throwing 3,000 men out of work.

The consumers affairs debate began Tuesday, with opposition MPs describing the legislation setting up the new department as toothless.

Both Conservative and NDP critics hit the fact that the bill does not set out in detail how the government proposes to deal with prices, which they described as the main concern of the consumer.

FACTORS COMPLEX

Mr. Turner replied that price movements are due to complex factors beyond federal control.

For instance, international economic developments had a significant impact on Canada because of its heavy foreign trade.

TERSE COMMENT BY JOEY AFTER BYELECTION LOSS

GANDER, Nfld. (CP)—"The Liberals are now down to 38 from 39 seats out of 42 and the Tories are up to four from three out of 42."

That terse statement — Premier Joseph Smallwood's only comment Friday night after a Progressive Conservative by-election victory that broke an 11-year-old Liberal hold on Gander—summed everything up, even if it didn't add anything new.

Harold Collins, 42-year-old councillor and Canadian National Telecommunications superintendent here, defeated Liberal Jack Robertson by 2,853 votes to 2,041. Mr. Robertson, a 55-year-old hotel operator, has been mayor of this town since 1958.

It was the first time the PCs had taken the riding since it was created in 1956, although Mr. Collins missed by only 200 votes in his first of three attempts in 1962. Municipal Affairs Minister Beaton Abbott retained the seat that time for the Liberals,

Charles R. Granger left federal politics a year ago to enter Mr. Smallwood's cabinet and, running in Gander in the general election of Sept. 8, 1966, piled up 3,180 votes to 2,022 for Mr. Collins.

But Mr. Collins turned the tables Friday. He led from the first poll count 7-6, and increased his margin with every new announced count.

Mr. Granger's resignation last month to return to federal politics as minister without portfolio brought about the byelection.

He was invited to join the federal cabinet after Newfoundland's veteran Liberal minister at Ottawa, J. W. Pickersgill, resigned to become the first head of the new National Transportation Commission.

The campaign brought a direct confrontation between the provincial party leaders—18-year veteran Premier Smallwood and Opposition Leader Gerald Ottenheimer.

All Out of Step But . . .

MORE AND MORE UNITED States newspapers, former supporters of President Johnson's Vietnam war program, are switching to critical attitudes, with most attention centred on a cessation—or at least a limitation—of the bombing in the north. The new press opponents and the older anti-Vietnam journals now number some of the most influential newspapers in the country: The New York Times, The Houston Chronicle, The Milwaukee Journal, The New York Post, The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, The Chicago Sun-Times, The Detroit Free Press, and numerous others.

Considered in their total effect, these newspapers represent a vast editorial influence and a growing reflection of public opinion throughout the United States. Their impact cannot be disregarded by Mr. Johnson as the next presidential election year approaches. They constitute a strong political reason for using the next few months to bring about conditions that will win Hanoi's agreement to negotiate.

It is clear now that that agreement will not be forthcoming until the northern bombing stops. North Vietnam's stand is that there can be no talks while the north is under duress, or under threat of a resumption of bombing, or while there is any appearance that negotiation by the North is being bought with a bombing halt.

This creates a situation which Mr. W. D. Moyers, Mr. Johnson's former press secretary who now publishes a daily paper, sums up as: "A pause in the bombing is something the President might want to gamble on." The New York Times pursues the idea a little more deeply in criticizing State Secretary Dean Rusk's contention that American security is at stake in Vietnam.

"What the whole approach ignores," says The New York Times, "is the special nature of communism in Vietnam, the native origins of the Viet Cong, the historic Vietnamese antagonism toward China, the divisions in Asian and world communism, the Sino-Soviet conflict and the cautiousness of Chinese foreign policy even during the madness of the cultural revolution. It vastly exaggerates the importance of Vietnam, geographically a dead-end street, in the defence of Asia and the Western Pacific—let alone the United States."

What that says in effect is that United States policy on Vietnam is years out of date, ignorant of the world situation, and unheeding of the new facts and trends of this decade. This alone is a searing indictment of Mr. Johnson and his foreign policy. For lost press support to return to the President it will be necessary for him to reverse his policy—an even harder decision than for the country's major press outlets to change theirs.

In the face of such mounting criticism—and the same process is taking place abroad among America's allies and friends—Mr. Johnson appears increasingly to be unable—rather than merely unwilling—to change his Vietnam policy. The dreaded quagmire war on the Asian mainland against which every western power has been warned seems inexorably to be claiming its toll in men and wealth.

It will take a big man to reverse the policy of the United States in Vietnam. The question is becoming more clearly one of whether that man will be Mr. Johnoson—or his elected successor.

Frosting

NOW THAT THE PERSIFLAGE and banter over adoption by B.C.'s Premier Bennett of the title of prime minister has ended, perhaps it is time for a critical look at the meaning of the change in a national context.

On the basis of precedent, Mr. Bennett may claim to follow in the footsteps of two of his predecessors who preferred the title of prime minister. In the written constitution there is nothing which restricts the new title to the first minister of the Crown in Canada rather than the first minister of a province. But the common usage of a century has established this differentiation in the public mind.

Mr. Bennett's justification for the change was that the people of British Columbia (not Mr. Bennett personally, of course) felt slighted because Premier Robarts of Ontario was addressed as "Mr. Prime Minister" at a university convocation, while Premier Johnson of Quebec was called prime minister in English. As the greatest province in Canada "we should not play second fiddle," Mr. Bennett declared.

The question, however, arises: Isn't what Canada needs at this juncture —irrespective of partisan politics — provincial leaders of a stature permitting them to ignore the dubious elevation conferred by the title "prime minister" and who can see rather the problems of Confederation whole and not fragmented by regional ambitions?

British Columbia is not an independent state, nor do its people wish it to be one. They are made uneasy, however, by the many speeches of their provincial ministers, prime and otherwise, which—despite protestations of loyalty to the concept of Canadian unity—carry a threat to centralized Canadian government.

By their fruits ye shall know them. Mr. Bennett is robed with far too impressive a record as a provincial premier to require the supplementary glory of a semantic crown.

The Wedge

SCIENTIFIC CO - OPERATION between the United States and Russia—one of the most fertile prospects for bringing the communist and non-communist worlds together—is slowing down, according to officials in Washington. It is a victim of the American escalation of the Vietnam War.

While an exchange program involving 45 American scientists and the same number of Russians each year is still being carried on, half a dozen major new exchange projects agreed to last spring have been cancelled by Moscow. Among these were studies by physicists of new theories of metal behavior; the problems of endangered animal species, and permission for American geologists to make field trips in the Soviet Union which had never before been granted.

The growing hostility of the Soviet Union toward the United States over the war in Vietnam is also credited with the refusal of Russian physicist Vasily Yemelyanov to accept a $20,000 Atoms for Peace Award from the Ford Foundation.

The toll taken by the struggle in Southeast Asia cannot be reckoned only in the wastage of lives and money. The indefinite postponement of closer co-operation between the United States and the Soviet Union, with all that this implies in world security, must be charged up as one of the major costs of the war.

Expo Future

Montreal Gazette

Mayor Drapeau deserves admiration for his efforts to maintain a permanent exhibition on the islands in the St. Lawrence. The difficulties in financing such a permanent exhibition may be great, and the problems of obtaining support from other governments may be awkward.

But the idea of saving Expo 67 from totally vanishing, and keeping something of its spirit and theme alive is typical of Mayor Drapeau's determination to maintain Montreal as a big and outward-looking city, a truly metropolitan centre, with interest and meaning for the world. It is similar to Mr. Drapeau's hopes to bring the Olympic Games to Montreal.

Even if not all these plans, for one reason or another, may come off, the attitude of keeping Montreal in the forefront, of looking ahead with zest and confidence, and not with littleness and doubt, is, in itself, a bright asset.

Montreal will need that attitude in the years to come, even more than in the past.

Who's on First?

Ottawa Citizen

Premier Bennett of British Columbia has decided that for prestige purposes, he is to be known in future as Prime Minister Bennett. If the idea catches on, the next federal-provincial conference may consist of all chiefs and no Indians.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

Re-Establishing Power in the Security Council

UNITED Nations Day, 1967, which will be observed next Tuesday, finds the United Nations climbing back out of a serious illness — ambulatory, convalescent, but by no means fully recovered. The UN had an operation in 1964-5 in which its power to tax member states for peace armies was amputated. A severe complication occurred in May, 1967, when its principal peace army was ejected from a trouble zone — and war quickly followed.

Frye

These were severe blows. But the body politic survived, and is adjusting to a new condition of reduced effectiveness.

Chagrined at its inability to fend off the June war, the UN is trying hard, this time, to get a lasting Mideast settlement. Diplomats are conducting intense behind-the-scenes negotiations to bring Arabs and Jews around a peace table, or at least into contact, perhaps through a UN intermediary.

In other areas, too, the world organization is seeking to re-establish its reputation for usefulness.

It is nudging small countries to forego building atomic bombs.

Encouraging Co-operation

It is organizing and encouraging co-operation in outer space, on the ocean's vast bottom, and across the frontiers of the peaceful atom.

It is stirring the conscience of the world community to succor more than 2,000,000 destitute refugees.

It is tackling, though as yet with limited success, two great potential causes of World War IV (the war after next): race conflict, and the poverty-and-riches gap.

None of this is by any means negligible. It is a considerable answer to critics who would hasten the world organization to a premature grave.

Yet the UN remains haunted by challenges it cannot, or has not, met.

A prolonged and bloody war is raging in Viet Nam. The UN has tackled this problem only tangentially, recoiling from the all-out intervention which diplomats fear would be counter productive.

An immense challenge is posed by China, a paranoiac giant which must be cured, contained, or destroyed in the next decade if the world is to know stability. But the UN has yet to establish even a reliable channel of communication with Peking.

There is the haunting problem of the two Germanies, which in turn divide Europe in two. Events are stirring in that part of the world, but the UN is not involved.

An organization formed to "save succeeding generations from the scourge of war" can reasonably be faulted for making only scant contributions to problems such as these.

The difficulty is it has not prepared itself adequately to tackle them. It has not even gathered the right people around its negotiating tables.

The UN is at once seeking universality of membership and shying away from it. It is opening its doors to the poor, the lost and the fragmented, but denying admission to major centres of power in the world.

The private negotiations it has arranged on the Mideast are not feasible for Vietnam because two of the major parties involved — Hanoi and Peking — are not represented here (and, after years of exclusion, probably would not now come, even if they were invited).

Similarly, the UN cannot provide opportunity for informal private contact between the two Germanies because only one of them has observer status.

There are important political reasons for barring Hanoi, Peking and Pankow. But the effect is to remove UN diplomacy from the center to the periphery of problems in which these capitals are involved.

Changed Character

Meanwhile "ministates," which are fully represented, have changed the character of UN diplomacy and the power balance between its organs. Sometimes they insist on their viewpoint even though the policy decisions which result are far removed from reality and unrelated to the UN's follow-through power.

Thus the 122-nation General Assembly, which in the 1950s was a repository of hope and confidence — it was, indeed, a court of appeal from Russia's irresponsible veto — has become, in the 1960s, a cacophonous and unpredictable forum, undisciplined, which few if any of the great powers take seriously.

The 15-nation Security Council, in which decisions must be negotiated in advance — because the veto prevents them from being imposed — is coming once again to be the recognized and accepted center of UN power.

This is what the original founders intended. But it shatters an attractive idea: a UN in which the conscience of the world community could override the stubborn, short-sighted, or obstreperous behaviour of the few.

Perhaps that was never more than a dream. At any rate, the many have not exercised their power with full responsibility, and it is progressively being taken from them.

And the UN, now dependent for meaningful action on great-power agreements, is operating in a more limited sphere.

Access to Beaches

Ed Gould's article, October 7, "Trespass by Appointment Only" is quite accurate. There are people who don't want the public to get to the public's beaches!

It seems that a private property concept reaches down below high water mark!

Some of us have been agitating for years to have public access to beaches made clear so that people can get to them. — Eve Smith, South Pender Isle, B.C.

Male Nurses

It was recently reported that social stigma was the reason behind the lack of male nurses in B.C. Hospitals.

Ironically this excuse was given by the nursing administrator of the largest hospital on the lower mainland whose record for its acceptance of male nurses leaves much to be desired.

If by "nurse" is meant a person who cares for and looks after the sick, then closer observation of our local public hospitals would indicate that males are engaged in this art. Most hospital administrators would agree that without these men the modern hospital would not function. Evidence of this is the favorable remuneration received by these men and the strong bargaining position they hold.

I refer to the nursing orderly; who despite this so called "stigma" has been allowed by female nurses in general to undertake certain nursing duties declined, under the guise of a false modesty, by female nurses who have refused to accept a basic principle of the nursing profession. Nursing may transcend the barriers of race, creed, and nationality and yet fails to transcend the barrier of sex, by allowing semi or untrained orderlies to nurse our male patients.

The public of Victoria might well ask of its nursing services, "Are you giving due regard for our male patients, particularly our aged sick?"—Male Nurse.

FROM TOKYO

By CHARLES BARTLETT

A Zephyr of Change in Japanese Pacificism

AS A SYMBOL of the spirit in which the Japanese are re-arming, the headquarters of the Self-Defence Agency here is very different from such places as the German "Pentagon" on the outskirts of Bonn. American visitors to the Bonn establishment are apt to be chilled by the crisp, efficient air of the place, and the heavy-heeled soldiers. The scene somehow evokes uncomfortable memories. But nothing could seem less menacing than the headquarters which the Japanese inherited from their occupiers.

Bartlett

A drowsy policeman stands at the gate nodding at the traffic. The uniforms are worn with an almost sloppy diffidence. No flags are flying — there doesn't even seem to be a flagpole.

Windows and doors are so casually open that the visitor suspects he could go anywhere without challenge. "We aren't allowed to have secrets," explains his host. "Of course we have some but we don't acknowledge them."

Less Than Candid

This need to keep the public reassured that nothing evil is afoot causes the government to be less than candid on many defence questions. For example Japanese officials made a point of reacting coldly in public to Secretary McNamara's announcement that the United States will erect a thin ABM defence against China. They underscored the danger that the move may escalate the nuclear arms race.

This was the reaction that fit the public's hatred of nuclear weapons. But privately these officials acknowledge that the decision delighted them because the screen against China's missiles will harden the credibility of the umbrella which shelters Japan. An American president will be readier to exert his deterrent in defence of the Japanese if he knows that his own people are safe.

Similarly the Japanese attitude on the nuclear non-proliferation treaty has waggled over the past year from a solid indorsement to an echo of the West German reservations. Now there is concern that the interests of the non-nuclear countries are not adequately considered and even some veiled hints that Japan may decide eventually to opt for nuclear weapons.

A crowning ambiguity is generated by the issue of Red China. Premier Sato's injunction to the Indonesians to avoid isolating the Chinese was an expression of his countrymen's anxiety to keep the trade doors open to the mainland. A public uproar arose two years ago after the leak of a Defence Agency plan which projected Red China as an aggressor.

But now the Japanese are dismayed and confused by the Red Guard revolution and the nuclear tests. Red China emerges as the nation they like least in public opinion polls. Commentators now discuss the dangerous aspects of the mainland neighbor with a candor that would have been frowned upon two years ago.

Industrial Priority

But the combination of these fresh fears and the American pressures is not enough to hasten the pace of Japanese rearmament. The strong pacifist sentiment is bolstered by the priority allocation of money and manpower to industrial expansion. In fact the Japanese hope they can manage to spend less than one per cent of their GNP for defence in the years ahead. They are spending only 1.6 per cent now.

They are far from accepting Washington's urgings that they become a bastion in the containment of Red China. They won't even consider defence arrangements with friendly neighbors like South Korea. They prefer to put heavy reliance upon the United States.

But at least a new generation of experts has begun to debate the defence issues in public. This can become an important step toward dispelling the hypocrisy which now obscures Japan's view of its future in the world.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

Go for a drive along the West Saanich Road and some of the byroads in the Keating Valley.

The color pattern of the dogwood, maples and the cottonwoods blends in with the background of the conifers especially as the cedars are now discarding the old needles, which hang in rich festoons on the twigs.

n several places where they were planted many years ago you will see the pale yellow of the acacia. Mingled with them you can see the tall spreading white elms in stately outline.

There are many places in gardens where the brilliant red of the sumac meets the eye, and the orchards with their ripe apples make a very pleasing effect.

There are many beautiful flowers each with its array of color adding to the enchantment of a wonderfully productive land.

The stubble of the grain fields and the new bright green of the pastures seem to speak of nature's way of providing for the needs of today and for the years to come.

The farms in this luxurious valley, with their orderly rows of loganberries, strawberries and other small fruits, the tidy yards and clean-painted houses make this perhaps one of the most attractive areas of the Island.

If one stops on a rise and looks around he can see to the east the sea and the ships that sail to all parts of the world, to the north the rounded conifer-covered top of Mt. Newton, to the west the hills of the Malahat, and far off in the background the snow peaks of the mountains.

This is a land unspoiled by subdivisions, a land to preserve.

Liberal Euphoria Ended

By PETER C. NEWMAN

OTTAWA—The last of the official state visitors departed Ottawa this week and with them vanished the final wispy remnant of the Liberals' Centennial summer euphoria.

At no point during their stormy four years in office—not even in the bear pit of the scandal debates — has the Liberal mood been so gloomy. For the first time since Lester Pearson came to power in the hopeful spring of 1963, there is open talk in party circles that the government may be defeated in the next election.

Newman

This is not to intimate that there exists panic in the cabinet room or that the government is falling apart, the way the Diefenbaker administration disintegrated in the winter of 1963.

Instead, there's a certain fatalistic acceptance of the many political errors of judgment that have been committed during the past few weeks.

Nothing seems to turn out right for the Grits any more, whether it's a major decision (like the jump in NHA interest rates) or a relatively minor move (like the self-promotion of Jack Pickersgill to become the country's $40,000-a-year transportation czar).

What's new is that the Liberals for the first time are criticizing themselves, debating the merits of a period in opposition and brooding about how they might have done things differently.

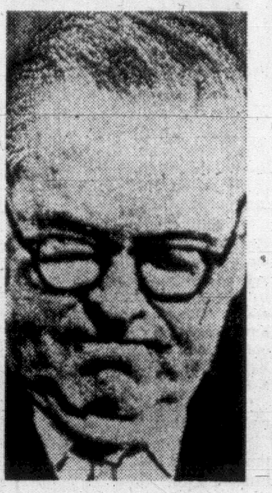
Subtle Hints

To the observant among them the most telling indication of how low the administration's repute has sunk are the subtle hints wafting from the higher echelons of the civil service that they have just about written off this government as incapable of solving the many grave crises it has brought upon itself.

Why the mood has gone so sour so suddenly for a government which seemed only a few months ago to be at last coping adequately with the nation's problems is due to at least four factors:

1. John Diefenbaker's departure from the Conservative leadership has drastically altered Canada's political equation.

Robert Stanfield may lack his predecessor's charisma and killer instinct, but in his very presence he is providing a political element the Liberals haven't had to reckon with since they took power in 1963: There is now available to the electorate a credible head of an alternative government.



LESTER PEARSON
. . . when will he quit?

2. Prime Minister Pearson's unwillingness to make any public—or even private—declaration about his future intentions has seriously impaired his administration's morale.

There's little concensus within the party on what he should do. Most backbenchers want him to stay, while most aspirants for the leadership want him to go. But pressure is beginning to mount from both groups that he should make his decision known soon.

At the moment, it looks as though Pearson will probably retire late this spring, but will not announce his intention to do so until after January's federal provincial constitutional conference.

Complications

3. Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp's campaign to heal the nation's financial crisis has run into serious complications.

There is no disagreement in cabinet that up to a billion dollars' worth of planned exependitures need to be cut, but each minister has been putting up stiff resistance about how much of the bite should come out of his department's estimates. The really tough decisions have yet to be made and one of the complicating problems is that several of the ministers in charge of the big spending departments are also after the leadership.

To demonstrate how determined he is to break the inflation psychology that seems to have taken hold of the economy, Sharp will almost certainly table an extra budget in December. The prospect is for a stiff jump (perhaps as much as 10 per cent) in personal taxes. One possibility being investigated is to adapt the controversial American idea of collecting the tax in the form of a surcharge.

ROBERT STANFIELD
. . . an alternative

4. Rene Levesque's recent repudiation at the Liberal party's convention in Quebec City has taken some of the immediate lightning out of the French-English crisis. But none of the deep-rooted problems are any closer to solution.

The predominant issue at the moment—and it has to be stated boldly—is how to prevent the Quebec government from moving to the brink of economic collapse.

No open bids are available for Quebec's bonds and many holders are selling them off before maturity. According to The Financial Times, at least one big U.S. insurance company has cleared out its Quebec holdings and told dealers it isn't interested in future offerings. Bond market prices in general are at their lowest levels in 40 years.

One of the highest personal priorities of Premier Daniel Johnson is known to be a trip to Wall Street before the end of this month to persuade bond buyers yet again that he's not a separatist. (His federalist declarations from Hawaii were issued after he had visits from two of the province's most influential investors, warning him of how serious the situation had become.)

DANIEL JOHNSON
. . . financial trouble

The Pearson government is fully conscious of the economic crisis. The spectre which haunts official Ottawa is that unless some effective action is taken the final resort may have to be an emergency devaluation of the Canadian dollar.

With problems like this to solve, it's little wonder that to some Liberals the opposition benches look like a welcome temporary haven.

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Reviewed by Peter Murray, Times Wire News Editor

The Russians and Americans both made spectacular achievements in space exploration this week but, as usual, the Soviet Union had the edge.

Target of the two spacecraft launched in June was the planet Venus, which has long been the object of speculation about the possible existence of conditions for life as we know it.

The Soviet ship Venus IV arrived first after travelling approximately 200 million miles through space to catch up to the orbiting planet.

Venus was 50 million miles distant from earth when the Russian craft reached the outer atmosphere, split, and then dropped an instrument package on the surface by parachute.

The capsule radioed information back to earth as it made its 96-minute descent through the thick clouds that surround the planet. The gist of the radio messages: Venus is hot.

Temperature range radioed back by Venus IV was 114 degrees Fahrenheit in the outer reaches of the atmosphere to 536 degrees at the surface.

The Venus IV instrument package was made of special heat-resistant metals but still stopped sending as soon as it completed its soft-landing, indicating it may have been damaged or consumed by the fiery heat.

●

About 36 hours later the U.S. spacecraft Mariner V began taking data readings in Venus' outer atmosphere as it flew past the planet at 19,000 miles an hour. Scientists estimate that it travelled within 2,480 miles of the surface.

Mariner V's findings were to be evaluated this weekend after relay of the information stored by tape for a later replay, but preliminary findings were said to indicate the presence of a magnetic field which the Soviet craft did not find.

●

American scientists estimated that Venus IV was the 12th Soviet attempt to send a spacecraft to the vicinity of Venus. Its success put the Russians about six years ahead of the U.S. in interplanetary exploration, they said.

"To go from Sputnik I to Venus IV in 10 years illustrates the powerful base of technology being developed in the Soviet Union," said James Webb, head of the U.S. Space Agency.

●

Meanwhile, back on this planet:

Negotiations continued backstage at the United Nations to find a basis for settlement of the Middle East stalemate. U.S. Ambassador Arthur Goldberg met Arab and Israeli representatives separately as fears grew in Washington that the Arab nations might resort to war again out of a sense of frustration and desperation after their costly defeat.

Other reports indicated President Nasser of Egypt might be softening his implacable position against Israel . . .

Also at the UN, Britain was confronted with renewed demands by African nations to use force against the white supremacist regime of Ian Smith in Rhodesia. It is generally admitted that the program of economic sanctions and boycotts against Smith is not successful . . .

Fighting a new wave of wildcat strikes and slowdowns, Prime Minister Harold Wilson blamed the Communist party for attempting to disrupt the economy and prevent Britain's recovery . . .

●

Anti-Vietnam protests, including a woman's suicide by fire in Los Angeles, mounted during the week in the U.S. leading up to today's massive demonstration in Washington outside the Pentagon. Scores were arrested in cities where they attempted to block off the entrances to draft board centres . . .

The first Roman Catholic world laity congress in 10 years issued a blunt appeal in Rome to Pope Paul to let married couples decide about birth control themselves . . .

In Ontario, Premier John Robarts led the Conservatives to victory in a general provincial election but with a reduced majority from 1963. biggest gains were scored by the NDP. New standings in the legislature are Conservatives 69, Liberals 28, and NDP 20.

Who's to Decide Who Shall Live or Die?

By ART STOTT

Dr. Peter Banks has spelled out an issue of life or death which should fill his profession and the general public with awe. He foresees the time—and we are already moving into it—when scientific medicine will have developed devices and techniques capable of keeping a patient alive but so expensive that they cannot be offered to everyone who needs them. Eventually decisions will have to be made to determine who shall receive treatment and live, who shall be denied it and die. In his opinion doctors are the people best equipped to make the decision.

Stott

Dr. Banks, it seems to me, is not so much forecasting a new development as emphasizing one that has existed from the days of successful medicine. For years personal finance has been a factor in survival for the ill. The person who could afford the best doctor and the best treatment, in my view, has had a better chance of recovering from a critical ailment than has the man who could not afford the highest skill or the most expensive devices. Carry the point to the extreme and think of people in regions of extreme poverty where the spark of life goes out because they have not enough on which to subsist.

★ ★ ★

The reason Dr. Banks' statement stands out starkly is that we are reaching a point in medical advance where techniques and devices which could make the difference between life and death cannot be extended to everyone who can afford them.

In a day of simpler faith, the devout could attribute death to God's will. Even the fatalist could take the position that when your number came up, you'd had it. Such conceptions avoided the dreadful pronouncement by a fellow human with power to declare who should live and who should die.

I have seen that power exercised only once in an Assize Court trial in which a man was sentenced to be hanged after due legal process. The agony of pronouncing sentence was etched deeply on the face of the judge—and this in spite of the fact that it was rendered against a prisoner whom a jury had found guilty.

Our society take particular pains to avoid this final judgment. At present Parliament has before it a bill to eliminate capital punishment except in cases of police and prison officials killed in the line of their duties. Our law seeks to deprive the individual of the right to decide whether or not he shall live or die—unless, of course, his attempt at suicide is successful.

It can be argued, of course, that a decision by a doctor on which of various patients shall receive life-saving treatment must be viewed positively. The effort must be regarded from the standpoint of giving life that would otherwise be lost. The corollary is, unfortunately, inescapable.

The dilemma was discussed last spring by Dr. David Suzuki of UBC in a lecture he delivered to the local University Extension Association on "Genetics and the Future of Man".

★ ★ ★

Dr. Suzuki described the advances made in his field and indicated the manner in which genes could be combined, or manipulated, to produce a superior being. Deficiencies could be eliminated by selective breeding. Potential parents with faulty genes—or those carrying characteristics considered not desirable—would be denied the right to have children.

Having made his explanations and described advances in genetics, Dr. Suzuki came to the crunch. Who, he asked, would decide which people would have children? A race of invincible men was possible, he said, but where would the world be today if Hitler had been given the power of decision?

Dr. Suzuki drew attention to the wide variety in human judgment on the question of the perfect specimen. Whose definition should be accepted?

Who decides, asked the man who is important in his particular field. And somehow there was a negative reassurance in his reply: "Not me."

Dr. Banks approaches the question with courage. He is fortified by the knowledge that men in his profession frequently have to make life or death decision. But the doubts will rise when the actuality occurs.

'Under the Eye of a Hostile And Dreaded Censorship'

By EDGAR Z. FRIEDENBERG

(Mr. Friedenberg is a professor of education and sociology at the State University of New York at Buffalo. His latest book is "The Dignity of Youth and Other Atavisms. This article is the first of two condensed from a long essay in The Nation, a liberal American weekly of commentary and criticism.)

"In our times, from the highest class of society down to the lowest, everyone lives under the eye of a hostile and dreaded censorship," John Stuart Mill observed in his essay On Liberty.

It is hard to imagine what he would have said about life in 1967, in the days of the transistorized martini olive . . .

His statement is now truer than he could ever have imagined. There have been few times and places in history in which people have not lived as under the eye of a hostile and dreaded censorship.

But not everyone. What was modern about Mill's experience of social constraint was that it affected the highest as strongly as the lowest; in some cases, more strongly.

Traditionally, one assumes otherwise; the aristocracy is supposed to be licentious with impunity. Censorship and other forms of oppression are ordinarily directed by the legally constituted authorities against those who challenge them; and the authorities represent their most powerful social groups and assert the legitimacy of their demands on their subordinates.

●

When this becomes no longer true, it is questionalbe that there really is any longer an upper class; for status has not much meaning in the absence of power. This decline of the upper class, and along with it the decline of personal liberty, was the novel aspect of the phenomenon Mill witnessed, its central element of social change.

The censorship of which he complained, though ubiquitous, was largely unofficial and informal; it was not imposed from above. The hostile and dreaded censor was everywhere, was one's neighbor, was oneself. But he was real enough, and his actions were as binding as those of any inquisitor.

It is this sense of being under the eye of a hostile and dreaded censorship that I have called the spirit of fascism. In my judgment it has gotten steadily stronger since the beginning of the 19th century, though in some respects also less crude.

Nothing as strident and uncivil as Hitler is likely to erupt again in the form he made familiar. Brown shirts, to paraphrase the singing group called the Mothers of Invention, don't make it. But the basic trend continues.

●

There is little that is oppressive in our life . . . today that Tocqueville, writing twenty years before Mill (who draws heavily on his work), did not anticipate. But clarity may be improved by focusing on a specific, contemporary form the spirit of fascism is taking.

I could most easily have used the public school system and its practices as my source of examples; but so much of my writing has been devoted to this increasingly dismal topic that I prefer, on this occasion, to look elsewhere.

An equally informative, and depressing peculiarity of modern life . . . is the sacredness of the police as a social institution, especially among the less sophisticated lower-middle class — the people with "Support your local police" bumper stickers who enliven their lives by reading about child molesters in the Sunday supplement.

This does not, of course, imply that such people never find fault with their police. Indeed, police spokesmen are probably justified in their frequent complaint that they face increasing distrust and disrespect in attempting to discharge their duties.

But what is criticized is usually some specific police action. There is no complaint about the ideology police power expresses; in the mass media and among "straight" people, at least, each successive incident of police brutality or violation of civil liberty is regarded as an exceptional case — a malfunction, to be condoned, dismissed, or in rare cases investigated, in order to determine what went wrong.

This is rather the attitude Shakespeare takes toward royalty in his plays; in them there are kings who do a bad job, and even bad kings, but never a critical examination of the institution of royalty itself.

This suggests that there was something in the Elizabethan social climate that was inimical to any notion that the monarchy itself, or any assumption underlying it, might be a source of social problems. There is, I believe, a closely corresponding mechanism that operates in our society to limit criticism of police constraint.

In any case, no American speaking in any official capacity today dares to say, "No, it is not always better for the law to be enforced!" or "So far as we can judge by the evidence to date, race riots in American cities are usually precipitated by police action, and in the absence of zealous law enforcement they would probably not occur."

No more would he declare that "pot-busts, not marijuana, are what is demoralizing the students in my school, and until there is some positive evidence that the stuff is at least as harmful as alcohol we are not going to cooperate with any more of them."

All of these are reasonable assertions with a stronger empirical basis than the policies now in effect have to rest on, but they are never publicly made. Instead, the defenders of liberty accept the assumption that law enforcement is good in itself and argue only about whether a particular law should be repealed or whether due process has been violated.

Our reverence for law enforcement is not an expression of respect for the law itself . . . The policeman represents more than the law, and something different from the law; policemen, in fact, find themselves somewhat at a disadvantage in open court where the defendant and the witnesses enjoy formal protection. He represents the values and social attitudes of the common man, the anxieties and resentments of what, in some respects, is the most deprived level of society.

Young men who choose to become law-enforcement officers are after all choosing a comparatively low-paying and dangerous job whose chief appeal must come from its bureaucratized security and the opportunities it provides for controlling the lives of others.

This control may be benevolently exercised; in many cities the police informally and with little intrinsic reward in fact perform the services that preserve poor and desperate people from disaster — stopping husbands from beating up wives, getting sick people to the hospital, cooling down scenes of violence — and which are supposed to require the skills of professional social workers.

But the processes of self-selection that determine who will devote their lives to law-enforcement insure that the police officer will, on balance, be hostile to liberty and to any form of uncontrolled spontaneous behavior, though stereotyped forms of disorderly conduct may be tolerated with good humor.

STOP INJUNCTIONS NOW!

Injunctions are a legitimate and practical recourse provided by the law to prevent irreparable damage being done by one party to another. They were never intended for use in a labour dispute.

EX PARTE INJUNCTIONS ARE A GROSS ABUSE!

Imagine climbing into the ring with a heavyweight . . . with both hands tied behind your back. That's what an "ex parte" injunction tossed into the middle of a labour dispute does to organized labour in British Columbia. It effectively emasculates labour's right to bargain with the employers . . . and the trade union act permits it.

MUST WE PUT UP WITH THIS INJUSTICE?

Clearly the law must be changed to prevent the perversion of a legitimate, democratic process. For the sake of all our prosperity, the normal, healthy dialogue between labour and management must not continue to be poisoned by an unjust application of injunctions. We cannot allow labour-management relations to become enmeshed in legal procedures and technicalities. Last year, 17 trade unionists in British Columbia were jailed. How many more honest, dedicated citizens like these will suffer the same indignity before this abuse of the law is corrected?

We urge you to put an end to the abuse of injunctions in labour disputes. Sign our petition and let's put JUSTICE back into our labour laws.

'No One Would Understand Relationship Between Us'

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Duke Ellington — who has poured forth more than 1,000 songs, many of which have become part of American culture — seems unjaded by 40 years in show business.

In an interview, the 68-year-old Duke seemed untired after a day in which he worked from 9 a.m. to 2 a.m. writing music, playing piano and leading his band.

Ellington spoke of many things, including his long-time collaborator, Billy Strayhorn, who died recently of cancer.

"We had a relationship that nobody else in the world would understand.

SIX NOTES

"We wrote Jump for Joy on the telephone one time when he was in Florida. When he was in the hospital, the doctor said to give him something to do. So I said: 'I want an interlude and In the Beginning God is the title.' He wrote a theme of six notes representing those first six syllables in the Bible and only two of the notes were different from what I had already written. We were that close."

Of people he's known in jazz, Ellington said: "Just about everybody has contributed something. There are some outstanding influences — Sidney Bechet, Louis Armstrong, Coleman Hawkins, Dizzy Gillespie, Charlie Parker, Lester Young.

"With the exception of Bechet, these people were successfully imitated. People built tremendous careers on the imitation of these people. They launched categories, such as bop, based on Parker and Gillespie.

"But there were three inimitables — Bechet, Art Tatum and Django Reinhardt. Other people could get three notes but never an exact thing."

Ellington has been working on liturgical jazz ever since two Episcopal (Anglican) priests heard him at a night club in Redwood City, Calif., and asked him to write a musical service for Grace Cathedral in San Francisco His In the Beginning God has been much in demand in the United States and Europe.

CAN'T SAY NO

"I'm one of those people who can't say no. I'm like the girl in Oklahoma. So I say 'oh, sure' and before you know it the date is on me and they're saying: 'Where's my music?'

"I always have to have deadlines. I wrote Black and Tan Fantasy in a taxi coming down through Central Park on my way to the recording studio."

Lately, Ellington has been writing more of the "extended jazz tone poems" which started with Reminiscing in Tempo in 1935 and includes Black, Brown and Beige and Such Sweet Thunder.

He conducted the New York Philharmonic in the premiere of his humorous, still-not-recorded The Golden Broom and the Green Apple — city chick and country chick — in 1965. That work has since been done by guest-conductor Ellington and six other orchestras.

BIG PARADE

Ellington still likes to travel — "That is part of the big parade."

He seldom walks any place — "I might get fresh air poisoning . . ." never exercises and gave up drinking years ago.

He says he never worries.

"The bug disease is the worst disease in the world — letting something bug you."

Too Good A Trouper To Sulk

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — The statue of Buddha in the Waldorf Towers apartment looked unreal. Half hiding the placid, timeless face was a large blonde wig, tilted askew.

"I'm waiting for the hairdresser to come and fix it," said Carol Channing.

Rare indeed is the actress who creates one unforgettable role in the theatre. Carol did it twice, scoring as Lorelei Lee in Gentlemen Prefer Blondes in 1949 and as Dolly Gallagher Levi in Hello, Dolly! in 1963.

Miss Channing made musical comedy history by bringing in $17,015,018 in 1,272 consecutive performances of Dolly on Broadway and on the road. It was a personal triumph for her as well as a financial triumph for producer David Merrick.

So when Hollywood decided to film the musical, who did the title role go to? To Barbra Streisand.

HEAVY BLOW

The choice was a heavy blow to Carol, but she's too good a trouper to be bitter about it.

"Naturally, I was disappointed," she said. "But Barbra and I were always good friends. She's a creative person, and will do the role in her own way.

"It doesn't hurt me anymore. But I certainly did want to jump out the window at first."

She has six hour-long spectaculars to make for the ABC television network. There are also two more films to do for producer Ross Hunter, for whom she co-starred with Julie Andrews in Thoroughly Modern Millie, another box-office hit.

Then, in 1970, she has a commitment to appear in another Broadway musical planned by Merrick.

This gal who has been called "the blitz blonde with the clowndoll eyes" has the air of a hoydenish kitten on stage. Off stage, she is just as warm and friendly, but her comic, flighty mannerisms are underlaid by a vein of seriousness. She is a wise as well as funny kitten.

MODEL SALES GIRL

She worked as a model, receptionist, and sales girl before finding success. Today she values that success, and she values the happy family relationship she has with her husband and manager, Charles Franklin Lowe, and her son, Channing.

To her, happiness is "keeping busy at the thing you are built to do."

THE GREAT CITY OF LONDON
a personally narrated colour movie by
FRAN WILLIAM HALL
In this century practically every decade has had its city. Today it is London . . . which has long been known and loved as one of the truly great cities of the world. Now seized by change, London has burst into bloom. A blend of ancient elegance and new opulence, the city is alive with beatles and birds (girls); buzzing with minicars and "telly" stars; pulsing with excitement. London is the place to go and Fran William Hall has made the scenes that show London's pendulum now swing with verve and elan.

Stop Being Swayed By the Opinions Of Mediocrity!

By AUDREY JOHNSON

In the past week we taxpayers have been treated to several public statements on the subject of "grants in aid" to various cultural organizations.

We have heard strong expressions of opinion from Canada Council representatives who visited Victoria last weekend and an equally strongly worded rejoinder from Mayor Hugh Stephen.

Audrey

It seems to me to be quite reasonable that the Canada Council, in being approached for grants or increased grants, should expect to find a sensible attitude and adequate support for the petitioning organizations at local government levels.

Of course the point of His Worship's rebuttal is that Victoria, pro-rated on a basis of population figures, does as well as any comparable city in Canada.

Mayor Stephen himself has a proper appreciation of the arts for he has served both as president of the Art Gallery and on the Victoria Symphony Board.

But he is in a difficult position in a city that is divided against itself into four individualistic municipalities, each seeming to have difficulty in acquiring a broad concept of Greater Victoria—the capital city.

Four councils are involved in the over-all grant-making picture and under such conditions there is bound to be a substantial percentage of council members who operate on old-fashioned mundane principles with little concept of a modern city's responsibility to the arts.

Half Taken Back in Taxes

Probably, in any case, any mayor would feel compelled to lean over backward in attempting to keep his personal interest and appreciation in correct perspective.

But it is nevertheless, a misrepresentation to say that the Art Gallery receives an $8,000 grant when more than half of the amount is taken back by the city in taxes.

The mayor's qualifications regarding other art galleries—in London, Ont., and Saskatoon — as being civic owned is quibble.

Greater Victoria Art Gallery is centred around a core that was once the Spencer home on Moss Street.

This handsome old mansion was offered as a gift to the city by Miss Sara Spencer 16 years ago, to be used as a much-needed art gallery.

She made only one reasonable stipulation — that the group of citizens which had been operating an arts centre for several years in various unsuitable premises, should be the operating group for the new gallery.

After an insultingly protracted delay which almost caused the donor to withdraw her offer, the then city fathers, with great reluctance accepted the house and the stipulation, at the same time agilely side-stepping all responsibility.

However, it cannot be denied that the mansion was given to the people and that it has been run by a voluntary board of citizens ever since, providing fine services for Victorians young and old and bringing prestige to the city.

How much more "civic" in its best sense can an art gallery be?

No Wonder Boucher Popped

Looked at from the Canada Council standpoint how can the civic grants to the symphony appear anything but ridiculous?

They are faced with the fact that in this expanding city there is a 60-piece orchestra of semi-professional status, performing something like 25 concerts a year—an average of two a month. An orchestra that is attracting top international artists as soloists, feeding the young mind of the community with the finest in our musical heritage and providing the best students with experience as orchestra players.

And then they discover that other fact—that the inter-municipal grant-making body does not consider the orchestra worth even a slender five cents per capita subsidy.

It's not to be wondered that the Canada Council's Jean Boucher was jolted into outspoken criticism.

Another thing—I cannot understand why we should have to look first at what other people do before being able to make a decision in our own case.

Mature Enough to Decide

One might just as well enquire what our neighbors are spending on their children's education before deciding how much to spend on our own.

Surely we are mature enough to decide such issues for ourselves.

And surely we have reached a stage where even the less perceptive among us can read the signs.

Victoria has always been potentially a wonderful site for a development of learning and the arts—one that could become a mecca for a large area of the Pacific Northwest.

Now with the start of a conservatory of music (in which we have stolen a march on Vancouver), the inevitable forward progress of the symphony and the School of Fine Arts at the University, the future is most promising.

It is time to cease being swayed by the opinions of mediocrity, and those for whom "as little as possible for the mind" is a watchword.

It is time to see what is happening and what can happen to our city; for a revaluation and re-assessing that will set our own house in order, never mind Joe Blow's across the way.

DON JUAN the libertine, is the subject of Bastion Theatre's first Studio performance of the season, on stage at 1840 Blanshard Street, Thursday through Sunday next week. Anthony Jenkins has the lead in a reading of Shaw's Don Juan in Hell, and Peggy Walton Packard will appear with Norman Tyrrell and John Bray in excerpts from Mozart's opera about the notorious lover, Don Giovanni.

FOLK ARTS FESTIVAL

Exotic Food Adds A Festive Air

By BERYL PROUDMAN

All those responsible in any way for the Folk Arts Fiesta which opened in the McPherson Playhouse on Friday evening, should feel gratified both at the professional success of their production and the delight with which it was received by those who attended.

An amazing variety of ethnic groups and cultures was represented in a program of songs and dances; and an even gayer festive air was added by the unusually long intermission which enabled the milling audience to sample the interesting, exotic foods of many nations which were served in the theatre foyer and mezzanine by Muriel Johnson's team of home economics' students from Victoria secondary schools.

* * *

That this program was planned with professional skill and finesse was apparent throughout. It was fitting that a group of Indian dancers should open it with a dance of welcome and that the narrator should represent Indian culture; equally tasteful was the music used throughout—a piano, a valiant band of accordionists, the occasional percussive clacker kept the atmosphere unsophisticated and correct.

The lighting effects too added just a touch of drama, enough to highlight vivid costumes and to cover entrances and exits.

* * *

It seems important too that when such brilliant visiting performers searched this area for local talent, they should find authentic, thriving ethnic groups to support them; and that these national cultures, now embodied in Canadian culture should be maintained and passed on.

The inclusion of children in the Indian dancing and in that of the Victoria Scottish Country Dancers, ensured the heritage for yet another generation.

Les Danseurs du Saint-Laurent, Montreal, set a wild, carefree mood with their noisy, lively, beautifully executed dances.

The large Polish "Sokol" choir and dancers from Winnipeg offered, perhaps, the most widely varied program of all, for in all their songs and dances there was that abrupt change from the melancholy, plaintive, to the hilariously heel-tapping which seems so typical of their history of extreme sorrow and joy.

* * *

The last act, that of the Dnipro, Ukrainian Dance Ensemble from Vancouver, left the audience happy and excited after their gala performance. They danced with all the fire, zest and gymnastic ability which has brought deserved fame to Ukrainian dancers.

Of all the attractive costumes, those of the Polish maidens were the most lovely. They entered with their backs to the audience in a sort of Polish conga-line, thus hiding the splendid variety of their "aprons" until they were right on stage, and turned.

All the dancers made full use of the contrast between red or black skirts and white pinnies, petticoats or sleeves, and many interesting effects were added to the dancing lines by twisting and turning sequences.

Many must go unmentioned but Jack and Bessie Tang provided a charming, delicate pantomime; and David Galbraith proved a convincing Spanish Scot.

* * *

David Conrad, Irene Boese and Yolanda da Paoulo represented Canada, Germany and Italy in song, while Gail Bamford and David Watling performed lively Scottish and Irish dances.

Contributions from Spain, Norway and Wales were made by the Wynne-Shaw Dancers, the Sons of Norway and the Don Kyle singers.

In an entertainment full of authentic songs and dances from many nations, it seems sad that the folk arts of England should be represented by such vulgar pub-songs as "Fish-and-Chips" and "I've Got a Loverly Bunch of Coconuts" no matter how lively and colorful Jerry Gosley and his Pearlies make them.

Versatile, Unique, Top-Rated

Twenty-eight years ago, when Betty Farrally and Gweneth Lloyd founded the Winnipeg Ballet Club, little did they dream that their "brainchild" would become the internationally acclaimed, versatile and unique Royal Winnipeg Ballet of today.

Considered small by some standards, the company's size is an advantage which has been put to good use.

In its formative years, its smallness enabled it to set up quickly in either a community hall or a large theatre, and this versatility is still part of the RWB's appeal as a touring attraction.

With its 25 dancers, the company has produced ballet ranging from classical to contemporary.

45 CITIES

Currently it is launching its annual 45-city tour of the United States under the banner of famed impresario, Sol Hurok.

It will appear in Victoria at the Royal Theatre, Nov. 8.

One of its proudest achievements was the creation, in 1966, of Rose Latulippe, the first-ever, full-length ballet based on a Canadian theme.

MacKINNON

Commissioned by the Canadian Centennial Commission as part of Canada's celebration of the 100th anniversary of Confederation, the ballet is Canadian in every aspect—choreography by Brian Macdonald, a jet-travelling world-citizen, but a native of Montreal; music by Harry Freedman, Polish-born and Winnipeg-raised; sets and costumes by Robert Prevost, one of Canada's finest theatrical designers.

IRST IN COLOR

Rose Latulippe also became the first ballet presented in color when it was aired on both English and French Canadian Broadcasting Corporation networks in April, 1967.

The Royal Winnipeg Ballet has produced more completely Canadian ballets than any other group. Brian Macdonald, official choreographer to the company, artistic director of the Harkness Ballet and, until recently, director of the Royal Swedish Ballet in Stockholm, has choreographed 10 ballets for the company.

The choreographer was awarded the Service Medal of the newly-created Order of Canada in June, 1967, for his contribution to the advancement of Canadian culture.

IMPRESSIVE

The company's choreographic imports have been impressive, too.

Agnes de Mille has created several ballets for the company; Ruthanna Boris, who spent a season with the group, added four. George Balanchine, Peter Darrell and Sir Frederick Ashton have all added spice to the repertoire of the company.

In the current season, Agnes de Mille, Jose Ferran and Anton Dolin, among others, will add to the RWB's ever-growing repertoire.

The Royal Winnipeg Ballet may be small in number compared with the huge international classical troupes, but its own distinctive character has placed its stature at the international level. It has become an export of inestimable value to the Canadian nation as a whole.

The single night Victoria appearance is being sponsored by the Victoria Rotary Club.

MARINA AGAIN FEATURED

The charming and extraordinarily gifted young Soviet artist, Marina Mdivani, makes her second appearance before Victoria audiences Sunday and Monday when she will be featured soloist in the Tchaikowsky B minor Piano Concerto.

This rare opportunity of hearing an outstanding artist in concerto as well as recital performance, is the result of the new symphony series that offers six solo recitals prior to symphony concerts during the current season.

The orchestra's new music director Laszlo Gati, will be on the podium conducting an all Tchaikowsky program that includes the Capriccio Italienne and the Fourth Symphony.

ENTERTAINMENT CALENDAR

Sunday, Oct. 22, 3 p.m., Monday, Oct. 23, 8:30, Royal Theatre: Victoria Symphony Orchestra, all Tschaikowsky concert. Soloist, Marina Mdivani; conductor, Laszlo Gati.

FOCUS

By BRAD NUGENT

Canadian bands are in a rather tight squeeze when it comes to making even a sound let alone a name.

Pop music in Canada is still suffering growing pains. Groups that are in need of that big push right now can't get it, simply because the price tag that is put on everything from equipment to recording sessions is way above their means.

If a group can't afford equipment their chances of survival are pretty slim. Things wouldn't be so bad if instruments and the electronic gadgets needed to run them were all produced in Canada.

But, having to ship them up from the States and then add on a whopping per cent of duty at the border the prices nearly double the U.S. figures.

This leads a lot of groups into "selling their souls" to finance companies in order to get even the basic essentials.

The thought of more debt comes when the group, in need of more dollars for payments on their equipment that is already getting obsolete, is forced to hire the services of a promotion agency to supposedly round up more jobs and spread the group's name a bit.

Most Canadian promotion agencies are so new in the business that they don't even know the meaning of the word "promotion" but are simply out for that "fast buck" that they see similar American agencies making so easily.

So, consequently prices on everything from so-called promotion material to bookings are way up. All this can possibly do for a group is to help cut some joker sit back at his desk with a drink in one hand a cigar in the other while they are out on stages around the city.

If a group can survive this, and not too many can, the question of a record release comes to mind.

Now here is where the U.S. really has Canada over a barrel.

The United States has a music industry that can afford to keep several major recording outfits all going at once. Here in Canada no sooner does one diskery go broke than someone else buys up his 16th-hand equipment and opens up only to go broke and have "his" equipment bought from him.

Sure, the American outfits have Canadian branches, but you've got to get that big OK from the States before you can even set foot into the place.

So it's easy for one to see what a dollar-battle Canadian groups face even before they can direct any thought to getting anywhere in the States.

Galbraith Can't Be Ignored . . .

THE NEW INDUSTRIAL STATE, by John Kenneth Galbraith; Thomas Allen and Son; $8.75.

Reviewed by Gordon W. Bertram

GALBRAITH
. . . informed majority

John Kenneth Galbraith is certainly one of the most literate of contemporary economists as well as one of the best known.

Paul Samuelson of M.I.T. remarked, "it is given to few scholars to leave their mark on the language. Galbraith has bequeathed at least two expressions that will survive: the 'affluent Society' and 'Conventional Wisdom.' "

The New Industrial State, the most important and ambitious of Galbraith's works, presents a tightly organized, but highly controversial theory of history founded upon technological determinism.

Economic society and in many respects, the quality of contemporary life owe their nature, not to economic determinants, but to the advance of an increasingly intricate and sophisticated technology.

Changes Missed By Economists

Some of the basic changes which technology has wrought have, in Galbraith's view, been completely missed or ignored by most economists. Galbraith comments on his methods of forcing a debate. ". . . I would never again place myself at the mercy of the technical economists who had the enormous power to ignore what I have written. I set out to involve a larger community. I would involve economists by having the larger public say to them, 'Where do you stand on Galbraith's idea of price control?' They would have to confront what I said." The New Industrial State will not be ignored by the profession.

Emergence Of Big Firms

The argument proceeds as follows. The emergence of the large corporation is primarily the result of technology.

Production processes take much longer, capital requirements have greatly increased, and production requirements have become highly inflexible, given the time and money committed.

Contemporary technology demands highly specialized manpower and consequently a new type of organization is required for co-ordination. Since prices and costs determined in the market place are unstable, the mature corporation must engage in planning to control them.

Industrial planning for Galbraith is much more than a rational attempt of modern management to foresee and schedule actions required in the production and sale of goods. Planning in the corporation cannot proceed if the market is unstable.

Controls Market

The mature corporation controls the market, not to maximize profits, but because the requirements of technology demand planning.

The requirements of technology have also brought forth a new factor of production—the technostructure. The technical, planning and other specialized staff — the technostructure—are the effective decision makers who work through a complexity of committees. Power, therefore, in the modern corporation has passed to this new factor of production.

Galbraith then proceeds to explain how the technostructure manages to make the whole system work.

Much of what the firm regards as planning consists of eliminating unfavorable market influences.

Corporations Have Power

The large industrial corporations possess the power to control markets, for five hundred corporations produce close to half of all the goods and services in the U.S. economy.

Instead of many buyers and sellers producing in a competitive market there are typically only a few very large firms in major industries.

Readers of Galbraith's earlier Affluent Society will recall that as wealth increases the consumer is more easily persuaded by advertising and promotion to spend his income on the products already foreseen and produced through the planning of the corporate technostructure.

While individual consumption spending is controlled in such a way as to satisfy the technostructure's primary goals of security and growth for the corporation, the course of national income is not directly subject to control.

To absorb current output at established prices, it is critical that depressions be avoided.

The new industrial state provides, fortunately, for the regulation of aggregate demand through monetary and fiscal policy. This new role of the state is welcomed and required by the technostructure, for unlike the earlier entrepreneurial corporation (which would adjust to a depression by laying off labour) "the technostructure (the brain of the enterprise) can't be dismantled without endangering corporate failure.

'We Are All Kenyesians'

It follows, then, that a permanently high level of public expenditures, supported by taxes that change as national income changes, is not only ideologically unobjectionable but essential to the technostructure. (It will be recalled that several years ago Time Magazine finally and officially blessed this stabilizing role of the state when it featured John Maynard Keynes on its cover page and gave a lead article on the theme "We are all Keynesians now.")

In Galbraith's world the state also comes to the aid of the technostructure in an inflation. Rising prices disturb management planning and the wage-price spiral occurs in the industrial system because labor disputes at full employment are prevented in the large corporation by passing wage increases on to the consumer as price increases. One solution to inlfation supported by the industrial system is wage guide lines announced by the state.

Free Itself From Risk

The mature corporation has also succeeded in freeing itself from the risks of the financial market.

Dependency on the bankers is ended for the supply of capital comes mainly from the savings of the corporations themselves.

The small proportion of savings made by the average man reflect his role in the system—he is not meant to save—he is only meant to consume.

Finally trade union power is on the decline in the United States.

That unions have ceased to expand and have lost ground is a reflection, first of the substitution by the corporation of capital and highly skilled personnel for production workers, and second, of the closer identification of the labor force with the goals of the corporation.

'Great Vision Of Man'

The industrial system is "not in accordance with the greatest vision of man."

Galbraith is not happy with the quality of life associated with the changed society he has described.

In an increasing alliance with the state, the monolithic power of the large corporation so dominates the economy that is suppresses individuality, fails to serve the artistic dimensions of life, discriminates against public services which are not directly related to its needs, is too closely linked to higher education, absorbs economic conflict and tends therefore to end examination of social goals and minimize social introspection.

Even more dangerous for society is the close link through military procurement of the industrial system with the cold war (not the product of the industrial system). The growing influence of the scientific and education community appears to be society's main hope for escape from the comfortable servitude of the industrial state.

Neatly Fitted Into System

Many of the changes which Galbraith identifies are not all that clear and are not so capable of being neatly fitted into his analytical system.

First, it is crucial to his whole argument that the mature corporation—typically one of a few large sellers (oligopolist)—does not maximize profits but instead pursues the goals of security and growth.

If oligopolists actually pursued the goal of maximizing profits, then it would follow that they would attempt to restrict entry and therefore restrict output to less than would be achieved if there was more competition.

But Galbraith virtually ignores the extensive economic literature dealing with the restrictive monopolistic behavior of industries with only a few sellers.

Galbraith's system displays a difficulty of logical constructs.

If Premise Is Wrong

If the first premise is wrong, the successive deductions that follow are in error. First premises concerning economic behavior need to be grounded in fact.

Profit maximization as the most likely motivation of business organization, though subject to qualifications by economic theorists, has not been displaced by empirical studies.

Second, the desirability of prices, profits and output which the oligopolists manage to establish has been subjected to a searching analysis, which is virtually ignored in The Industrial State.

On the whole, economists conclude that there is a large amount of technologically justified concentration.

Real Cost Advantages

There are often real cost advantages for the large business firm but the degree of competition could be significantly increased if the barriers to entry were lifted for technologically and organizationally efficient rivals.

Galbraith ignores this type of issue and concludes that oligopoly results in economic efficiency.

Third, the role of competitive markets in modern industrial economy appears to be insignificant.

Yet the influence of the market is pervasive in the allocation of economic resources, to mention but one aspect. Labour and capital move to more productive undertakings in response to differences in wages and returns.

15 Per Cent Of Employment

Fourth, Galbraith uses corporate assets to show that the five hundred largest industrial corporations have over two-thirds of the total manufacturing assets in the United States.

However, if the proportion of total employment is used as a measure, then the five hundred largest industrial firms account for 15 per cent of employment while the 750 largest industrial, banking, life insurance, retail and wholesale and utility firms accounted for 22 per cent of total employment.

This data suggests a far smaller segment of the economy is a part of the technostructure.

Fifth, there is evidence that corporations are not independent of financial markets, for in the years 1960-65 corporations went to the market for one-third of their capital requirements.

Still Subject To Scrutiny

Sixth, there really is some doubt that consumers are simply the malleable instruments of the ad man.

Finally, and this is related to profit maximization, while the separation of ownership and management is a well-known fact, management is still subject to the scrutiny of the institutional investors and security analysts, who do represent the individual shareholder. Profit maximization can hardly be disregarded as the primary goal despite these serious reservations.

Professor Galbraith is indeed "the non-economist's economist par excellence." Economists and the public will be grateful for his contribution in raising the level of debate.

Iron Steeds Scratched In Story About Cornwall

VANISHING CORNWALL, by Daphne du Maurier. Toronto, Doubleday, 1967. 210 pp. 78 photographs, 2 maps. $8.95.

Reviewed by R. G. Lawrence

Seventy-seven of the photographs (by the author's son) are remarkable in revealing in them not a single motor car.

Anyone who has been in Cornwall within the past 10 years will be painfully aware of the ubiquity of the automobile in the narrow roads and small towns of Cornwall.

Yet the text of Vanishing Cornwall makes clear that this apparently wilful blotting out of the motor car is not a deliberate act of irresponsbility. Mrs. du Maurier, the novelist (Jamaica Inn, Rebecca, Frenchman's Creek), is well aware of the monster:

"Cars, lined bumper to bumper, seek entry out of Devon into the peninsula, often held up for hours on their journey, and when they penetrate the narrower roads, many of them winding, with high hedgerows masking the view ahead, the driver . . . risks a head-on crash. He often gets it."

The theme implicit in the title of the book is demonstrated in these words: "When coves and beaches covered with ice-cream cartons, cigarette-packets, cornplasters and contraceptives daunt the intending swimmer, and the sound of radio, speedboat and barking dogs pollute the air, I travel back some five and fifty years to 1912 . . ."

TIN WAS KING

The author does not, however, linger interminably in the sentimental memories of childhood, but as a part of her effort to acquaint the reader with the whole of Cornwall, takes him back through the mists of pre-history, to the days when tin was king.

Cornwall has an unforgiving landscape and coastline, as generations of miners, farmers, fishermen, and smugglers have learned. Mrs. du Maurier deftly combines realism and romance in her descriptions of an arduous past in this isolated county of England.

What she reveals with special clarity is the character of an independent, hardy, and superstitious people. For all her loyalty to Cornwall, the author has small sympathy for Mebyon Kernow, the Sons of Cornwall, who would revive the long-dead language.

The present and future of Cornwall inevitably concern Mrs. du Maurier.

Her final chapter is devoted to problems arising out of the mass invasion of each July and August, with its impact on the people of the county.

She shrewdly quotes Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch, a famous Cornishman:

"It is unhappily certain that any people which lays itself out to exploit the stranger and the tourist runs a grave risk of deteriorating in manliness; and as I had rather be poor myself than subservient, so I would rather see my countrymen poor than subservient."

Many of the proposals relating to the revival or establishment of industries in Cornwall are primarily of concern to countrymen, but the book has much in every chapter to interest readers abroad.

Dwindling Group Of Music Hall Buffs

SWEET SATURDAY NIGHT, by Colin MacInnes, MacGibbon and Kee Ltd., 1967, 160 pages.

Reviewed by Ann Saddlemyer

Do you remember "My old man says 'follow the van'" "It's nice to get up in the morning (but I'd rather stay in bed)" "If it wasn't for the 'ouses in between"? Or knowledgeably greet the names of George Formby (Senior, not Junior), Vesta Tilley, Marie Lloyd, Dan Leno, Gus Elen, Yvette Guilbert?

SUFFERS IN PRINT

Then you belong to that rapidly dwindling group—which once included Queen Victoria's Prince of Wales—of Music Hall buffs Colin MacInnes addresses in his history of the Pop Song, 1840-1920.

Originally designed as a series for the BBC, the book retains much of the quasi-intimate tone of the Light Programme, and inevitably suffers in print not only from its jocular verbosity but from the lack of piano accompaniment, or better still an accompanying record. "Burlington Bertie from Bow" requires the "coon-shouting" tones of Ella Shield, "Just a wee Doch-an'-Doris" the unmistakeable accent of Harry Lauder.

Without these echoes, reminiscences of the Music Hall pop artists become the unassailable but uncommunicable personal judgments of the historian himself. In Mr. MacInnes' personal Hall of Fame, Charlie Chaplin is dismissed as "a fine mime, an excellent comic, but not a great clown at all," while Harry Lauder is included reluctantly because "as well as a consummate artist," he was "a shameless tub-thumper."

The book therefore succeeds neither as a comprehensive examination of a significant social phenomenon nor as a genuine history of an important aspect of theatre.

Its most valuable feature remains the virtue of a good encyclopedia; a great deal of research has resulted in innumerable interesting anecdotes and biographical details, and the names of many once-great artists have been rescued.

ALL DISAPPEARED

But the ephemeral world of the '80s has not been recaptured. Seventy years ago there were more than five hundred Music Halls in central London; two years ago, with the exception of the Palladium (which does not really count) the last authentic Music Hall of the old era disappeared. And Mr. MacInnes, despite his genuine love for his subject, can revive neither its charm nor its environment. The most successful evocation of the spirit of that other age still belongs to the team of Osborne and Olivier in The Entertainer.

Old Max Can Mix It With Best In Writing for Laughs

AND NOW . . . HERE'S MAX, by Max Ferguson. McGraw-Hill, $5.50.

Well, here's our old pal Rawhide moseying into print, and the result is one of the funniest books of the year.

It's actually Max Ferguson's account of his 21 years in Canadian broadcasting but, of course, the highlight is the creation of Old Rawhide and his motley crew, including Granny of the "thoroughly rotten, corrupt and malicious personality" and Marvin Mellobell, "a sickeningly irritating embodiment of all the adenoids, pomposity and self-adulation that show-biz has to offer."

The rest of the story is very funny too, with light and witty anecdotes about CBC personalities (will they ever live them down?) and stories of practical jokes designed to enliven the tedium of an announcer's day.

Allan McFee was the worst offender, his habit being to insert an "unidentified noise on the line" at serious moments. "His specialty was a sound so obnoxious and startling that I've literally jumped at hearing it issue forth from my radio in the privacy of my living-room."

"He usually reserved it for the caesural pause in poetry readings or as a follow-up to such inviting dramatic dialogue as "John, darling, this will come as a shock, but I've felt for a long time now that you must hear it."

LOUD AND CLEAR

It was McFee too who used to shout insults into the microphone while the noises for a Chinese street-scene drowned out his voice, "O yang quong kee, stupid old CBC." That is, until there was a failure in the transmission of the program from New York and McFee's virtuoso performance went out over 50,000 watts with not a sound to disguise it.

Some of the most uproarious stories are about the early days of television interviews, when Max was tattoed on the screen, held captive by the teeth of a monkey called Clement Attlee and knocked out cold by a Japanese wrestler, "fine wholesome, dinnertime family fun."

Max's account of what happened when the cameras focused on a huge stallion who happened to be in the studio is a thousand times funnier than Art Linkletter's story about the elephant he had to interview.

HOW NOT TO

In fact, where And Now Here's Max is the very best in humorous writing—witty, urbane and convincing—Art Linkletter's Oops! or Life's Awful Moments (Doubleday, $4.75) is a depressing example of how not to be funny.

Ask people to send you jokes about embarrassing moments (don't worry about whether they're true or not), string them together without any continuity, forget that most people have heard them all already, throw in a few comments about your own reputation as a wit, and there you'll have it . . . the unfunniest book of the year. You'll only get away with it if your name happens to be Art Linkletter.—J.C.

Reeve Seeking Modest Author

Who was the author of a brief submitted to North Saanich council attacking the Stevenson and Kellogg recommendation for amalgamation with Sidney?

The question was raised today by Reeve J. B. Cumming, who supports the findings of the report. He wants to refute some of the arguments in the brief.

He also accused the author of the brief of lacking the courage to acknowledge his own work.

The anti-union brief was presented to the Oct. 10 meeting of North Saanich by Coun. F. C. Adams, and supported by T. C. M. Davis, a strong opponent of amalgamation. But the name of its author was not disclosed. No one would say who wrote it.

Both councillors are residents of Ardmore, a stronghold of the anti-union group.

REPORT BIASED

The brief criticizes the report and suggests it is biased in that it contains unproven assumptions and opinions.

It also stated that the final opinions expressed in support of amalgamation cannot be accepted as comprehensive or objective.

In answer to this charge, the reeve pointed out the firm is nation-wide with specialists providing studies and reports on all manner of functions, with offices in all major cities.

"Their greatest asset must be their reputation, skill and ability of their personnel," stated the reeve. "This has been amply proven and accepted across this nation.

"Against this we have a person who in spite of repeated requests could not be identified; who chose a personally popular but new and uninformed councillor (Coun. Adams) in his field to present the report.

LACKS COURAGE

"The integrity of a large, nationally known firm of specialists is challenged by someone who lacks the courage to acknowledge his own work," he added.

The reeve noted that the purpose of the Stevenson and Kellog report was to provide basic information and indicate trends as a guide to the electorate who can then use their "own" judgment.

One of the basic reasons the report recommended amalgamation, he said, was because municipalities all across Canada are faced with rising costs. And the best way to curb these costs was to avoid duplication of services and to employ highly-skilled administrative employees.

He pointed out that throughout British Columbia municipalities were amalgamating for better strength and protection.

"Many others, like us, are studying the subject," stated the reeve. "Are we so different? Is everyone out of step but us? Is our anonymous author right and the rest of Canada wrong?"

CHARGED with murdering American Nazi party leader George Lincoln Rockwell, John Patler, 29, has been committed for trial Nov. 27 at Arlington, Va. Patler, who pleaded not guilty, was ordered to stand trial after a judge turned down a request that he be committed to a state hospital for mental tests.

Canadian Takes Short Trip And Sleeps With Friends

OTTAWA (CP)—A year-long study of vacationing habits has revealed that Canadians are mostly stay-at-home holidayers, visiting friends and relatives.

The survey was conducted by the Canadian Government Travel Bureau as part of its research designed to assist the Canadian tourist industry. It covered the period from May 1, 1966, to April 30, 1967, before the impact of Expo 67 and other major centennial events.

It found that six out of 10 urban dwellers took vacations in the year, but only three in 10 farm dwellers. A vacation is something more than a weekend holiday, long weekend, or statutory holiday.

Of the 52 per cent of all Canadian adults who took vacations in the year, two thirds started them in July or August, nine out of 10 of them went on a holiday trip, and the average length of vacation was 19 days, or close to three weeks.

Eight out of 10 trips were by automobile. Single people, and couples without children, predominated in commercial transport, and few families with children tagging along took trips lasting more than three weeks.

The bureau's survey found that friends and relatives provided accommodation for almost half of all holiday trips.

About 10 per cent used trailers or tents, and camping was most popular with Western Canadians. Ontario residents spent a fifth of their vacations at summer cottages.

In their travels, Canadian vacationers tend to stay in Canada, or not venture far into the United States. Twenty per cent of them crossed the border, but only six per cent went to the Southern States. Seven per cent went farther afield, to Europe, the Caribbean, or elsewhere.

Within Canada, most vacationers did not travel far from their own provinces. Travel tended to be through New Brunswick and through the Prairie provinces, rather than to points in them.

Of all the Canadians who went from other parts of the country to the Atlantic provinces, one-third to one-half were from Ontario.

THE OLDER THEY GET THE WISER THEY GET?

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The North American comic strip portrayal of parents as "silly, stupid people" was deplored Friday by Stewart Sutton of Ottawa, secretary-general of the Vanier Institute of the Family.

He told the Ontario Public Health Association the husbands and fathers in the comics are mostly depicted as "some kind of a nitwit" while wives and mothers are presented as "always a bit queer."

New Program For Scouts Unveiled

OTTAWA (CP)— — Canadian scouting took a giant stride into the 20th Century Friday when it unveiled a new "boy centred" program for the 70,000 boys in the 11- to 14-year-old boy scout section of the movement.

Two years ago a new program was introduced for the cubs, boys 7 to 10. Last year the 14- to 17-year-olds were offered a new Venturer program. Now the main body of boy scouts will be given new scope to choose their programs and develop their leadership potential.

John L. MacGregor, director of program services, told a news conference at the Boy Scouts of Canada national headquarters here, that introduction of the new plan follows a seven-year study and a two-year testing period.

The new program, with its wide range of options and its emphasis on human relations and personality development, becomes effective September, 1968, but individual groups will have until December, 1969, to gear in to the new scheme.

DECLINING GROWTH RATE

F. J. Finlay, chief executive, Boy Scouts of Canada, said the movement has faced a steadily declining rate of growth. Boys who didn't join the movement at the minimum age of eight years tended not to join at all.

He said the new plan made it easier for boys to join at any age level and take part in a program compatible with their degree of maturity.

MacGregor said the Venturer program had already drawn numerous boys back into the movement. Program changes were not aimed at increasing membership, but the membership trend was a good indicator of the appeal of the program to the boys it was designed to serve.

Our target:
complete utilization

To us the word "utilization" means two things. Putting each tree we harvest to its best end use. And equally important, using as much as we can from each.

The future of every tree is determined from the moment we harvest it. Straight, prime specimens are destined for our plywood and lumber mills, where they can be used to maximum value. The other trees will be converted into pulp, newsprint and other paper products.

The log shown above is a Douglas fir, specially selected for plywood production because it's sound and has few knots. From an average 36" diameter log like this, we peel off up to an eighth of a mile of plywood veneer. The thin top part of the tree, not suitable for veneer or lumber, will reach the markets of the world as pulp. Section 1, the bark, will be used as fuel to produce steam power for our plant machinery. The high-grade veneer used to make plywood comes from Section 2.

Section 3 – the core – is reduced to chips for pulp. Substandard veneer clippings are used in the pulping process, while trimmings from finished plywood panels are converted to Pres-to-Logs for household fuel. Even the wood dust from saws and sanding machines is made into Prest-to-Logs or used as fuel for generating steam.

Complete utilization conserves vital forest resources and guarantees that every tree we harvest today will provide a full measure of prosperity in this province. That's our target. We're finding new ways to hit it every day.

WEEK ON MARKETS

Prices Suffer Sharp Setback

By FRITS ROOS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canada's major stock exchanges suffered a sharp setback this week as prices fell to their lowest levels since early June.

However, there were no signs of panic selling as volume remained a light 14,383,000 shares at Toronto compared with 13,172,000 for the four-day period last week.

Brokers say continuing high interest rates in the bond and mortgage markets are attracting investors away from stocks.

Adding to this situation are attempts by Canada and United States to introduce anti-inflationary measures to cool off the economy, they say. This will put a squeeze on profits, they add.

At Toronto, the industrial index, which measures the price movements of key issues, tumbled 4.79 to 160.72. It declined six days out of the last seven.

During the week, declines outnumbered advances almost two to one, despite a technical rally Thursday.

Blue chips suffered the brunt of the decline as Inco fell 3⅞ to 114, CPR 3 to 61½ and Falconbridge 2 to 90½.

Steels weakened. Brokers said part of this was due to the introduction of a bill in the U.S. Senate proposing limit on steel imports.

Algoma was off 1¾ to 20⅞, Dofasco 1⅝ to 21⅝ and Stelco 1¼ to 21.

Banks were mixed. Nova Scotia gained ⅜ to 13½, Royal Bank ¼ to 14¾ and Toronto-Dominion ⅛ to 12¾. Imperial Bank dropped ⅜ to 11⅞ and Bank of Montreal ⅛ to 11⅜.

LAURA SECORD DOWN

Among other industrials, Laura Secord declined ¾ to 15¼ despite the continuing takeover battle between Salada Foods and Fanny Farmer. Fanny Farmer is offering $18 a share while Salada Foods upped its bid to $18.50 from $18.12.

Dosco, which announced it would close down its Sydney, N.S., plant, dropped ¼ to 6¾.

Ford of Canada jumped 2 to 168 on reports that a settlement of the strike against its U.S. parent company had been reached. The strike, which resulted in the closedown of most of Ford of Canada's operations, was settled shortly after Friday's closing.

Magna Electronics moved up to 18 after it announced a $1.69 dividend for the year ended Aug. 31 compared with 85 cents last year.

Western Oils tumbled. Scurry-Rainbow dropped 2⅜ to 33¼, Great Canadian Oils Sands 1½ to 12⅛, Central-Del Rio and Home A 1⅜ each to 19⅝ and 21⅜, Hudson's Bay ⅜ to 37½, and Canadian Superior ½ to 43.

Dome Petroleum picked up ¾ to 59.

BASE METALS FALL

In base metal activity, Noranda was off 3⅛ to 51⅞, Pine Point and Rio Algom 2 each to 50 and 33⅜, and Denison 1⅞ to 83¼. Patino jumped 4¼ to 15¼ and Hudson Bay 1¾ to 60⅞.

Among golds, Kerr Addison gained ⅞ to 17⅝ while Dome dropped 1 to 46¾ and Campbell Red Lake ⅝ to 21.

On the speculative side, D'Eldona tumbled 6 cents to 1.01 on sales totalling 352,000 shares, while Conigo moved up 4 cents to 1.06 in total trade of 1,174,000 shares.

On index, western oils fell 5.36 to 199.33 and base metals 3.33 to 105.52. Golds gained 1.18 to 171.38.

At Montreal, the industrial index tumbled 5.51 to 164.81, utilities 2.91 to 137.08, banks 1.42 to 115.44 and papers 4.26 to 96.26. The composite index declined 4.43 to 154.68. Volume was down to 5,412,000 shares from 7,308,000 last week.

Higher Profits For Liquor Firm

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts Ltd. had net income of $40,799,775 or $2.75 a share in the year ended Aug. 31, compared with $38,021,516 or $2.21 in the similar 1966 period. All figures are in United States currency.

At the same time the company announced the U.S. internal revenue service has disallowed various tax claims the company made between 1958 and 1962, totalling $26,000,000.

Reach Agreement

VANCOUVER (CP)—A settlement has been reached between the International Woodworkers of America and Weldwood of Canada's small stud mill at Lac La Hache, Jack Moore, regional IWA president, said Friday.

Terms of the three-year contract include three raises totalling 44 cents plus raises equal to those received by coast IWA members in 1968 and 1969 negotiations.

FIRMS FORM NEW COMPANY

VANCOUVER—A new company with headquarters in Vancouver has been set up to offer specialized process technology, equipment and full-scale plants to the international pulp and paper industry.

The company, Chemetics Ltd., is a 50-50 partnership of the big Canadian Industries Ltd. and Chemech Engineering Ltd., an independent Vancouver firm established three years ago.

In announcing the new partnership, the companies said, "We believe there is a real need in the pulp and paper industry for specialized services which Chemetics Ltd. has to offer."

New Patent Regulations Due on Drugs

OTTAWA (CP)—Registrar-General Turner says the government is likely to introduce legislation soon amending the Patent Act to require compulsory licensing of drugs competing with already-patented drugs.

The recommendation was among those relating to patents made by the Commons drug costs committee last April.

The compulsory licensing, which would enable previously-restricted generic drugs to compete in price with brand-name products, was also recommended for drug protection processes, for foods and food production processes and for surgical devices.

Mr. Turner said in an interview, legislation amending the act could be brought down within two to three weeks.

Another amendment recommendation made by the committee was that the comptroller of patents, in setting terms of a licence, try to ensure the new products are made available at the lowest price fair to the licence holder.

Steel Haulers Vote on Offer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Striking steel haulers vote this weekend to accept a compromise their leader calls "lousy," or reject it and continue their violent strike grinding through its third month.

Strike leaders from the eight states, where the highway shipment of steel has come to a virtual standstill, agreed in Cleveland, Ohio, Friday to submit the plan to the rank-and-file without official recommendation. An answer is expected by Monday. Truckers in the Cleveland area, the first reported to have voted, approved the plan Friday night. Specific figures were not given. It was rejected in the Somerset, Pa., area by a reported 68-to-3 margin.

WEEK IN U.S. BUSINESS

Industrial Output Drops

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. House of Representatives put a multi-billion-dollar squeeze on the federal government's spending plans this week, but the Senate appropriations committee quickly eased the pressure.

For months, President Johnson has been asking for a 10-per-cent surcharge on corporate and personal income taxes. Congress has balked, contending the administration first must cut government spending.

This week, the House passed a resolution telling the government to cut its spending in the current fiscal year an estimated $6,000,000,000 to $8,000,000,000. But the Senate committee approved a resolution that continues until Nov. 15 the spending authority of government departments whose regular appropriations for the 1967-68 year still are pending in Congress.

The issue now will be hashed out in a joint House-Senate conference.

In other developments:

The Federal Reserve Board said strikes disrupted the advance in industrial production in September. It said its index of industrial output dropped 1.5 points to 156.3 per cent of the 1957-59 base period because of strikes in the auto, copper and steel-hauling industries.

The commerce department said housing starts increased by 3.8 per cent during September to reach their highest level in almost two years. Home-building activity during the month totalled 1,457,000 units at an annual rate, the department said—the highest since December 1965.

The department also reported personal income continued to advance at a record rate during September. It said the annual rate was up $2,000,000,000 from the $4,500,000,000 rise in August, and reached an annual rate of $633,500,000,000.

OUTPUT UP

Auto output for the week was expected to rise 10 per cent above last week as General Motors Corp., Chrysler Corp., and American Motors Corp., scheduled higher output. Because of the Ford Motor Co. strike, output was expected to trail the year-ago pace by 29 per cent. The auto-makers scheduled 148,577 assemblies for the week, compared with 135,142 the previous week and 208,093 a year earlier.

Retail car sales in the Oct. 1-10 period ran about 24 per cent below a year earlier. The sales were estimated at 198,763 cars, compared with 260,652 in the comparable period last year.

A number of the largest firms in the U.S. issued third-quarter earnings reports. Among those showing earnings advances were Xerox Corp., Radio Corp. of America, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., and Eastman Kodak. Lower earnings were reported by du Pont Co., Aluminum Co. of America, and Youngstown Sheet and Tube.

Steel production during the week was 2,498,000 tons, up 2.6 per cent from 2,434,000 tons the previous week.

Urban Renewal Plan Approved For Alert Bay

OTTAWA (CP) — A $101,375 grant to Alert Bay, to assist implementation of its urban renewal scheme, was announced Friday by Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

The village scheme includes clearance of several properties to provide sites for a small commercial complex, housing, off-street parking and new road links.

The plan is expected to be completed within five years.

Freight Docking Facility Set For Swartz Bay

By AB KENT
Business Editor

Swartz Bay ferry terminal will have its own freight docking facility before Christmas, making it the first combined freight-passenger terminal with individual facilities in the B.C. Ferries system.

Kent

Since early this year Canadian Pacific Railway's freight trailer ship has been using ferry authority slips at Swartz Bay, on a strictly temporary basis.

Now the CPR is building its own dock and truck marshalling area adjoining the provincial government passenger terminal.

Site preparation by Oliver Construction is completed and the CPR will award a joint contract for piers and steelwork next week.

It is expected that when it is in full operation the dock will handle most of the freight to and from Victoria with mainland connections.

★ ★ ★

Since the government ferries began their service almost 10 years ago, they have carried besides passenger cars and buses a heavy percentage of heavy freight, merchandise and foodstuffs destined for Victoria.

With a separate facility for freight only it is expected that CPR ferries will assume the role of "supply vessels" for Vancouver Island.

This is partly the case now on the upper half of the Island.

Besides its own boxcar and truck-carrying service between Nanaimo and Vancouver, the CPR engages F. M. Yorke and Sons, Vancouver towing firm having ferries of its own.

At the moment Victoria Machinery Depot is building a new addition to the Yorke fleet, following CPR specifications that will enable the vessel to carry freight trailers on two decks in addition to railway cars on the main deck.

The unnamed ship will be finished by the end of December, VMD president Harold Husband said, even though some delays are being experienced.

The ferry has novel hydraulic machinery, components for which are not all yet supplied. To avoid wasting time on the job VMD is proceeding with some of the superstructure work that would ordinarily have waited until the hull was launched.

Mr. Husband said the ship would be sent down the ways some time next month.

★ ★ ★

VMD also is busy with modifications to the SEDCO 135-F oil drilling vessel which it built for Shell Canada's first Pacific coast sub-sea petroleum hunt.

Moored in Port Alberni harbor, the great, three-legged barge has welders clambering around its pontoons and caissons three shifts per day.

They are improving the rig's fair leads that will enable operators to lay anchors on the drilling site with more speed and ease. Mr. Husband said Friday the work is going well and VMD's share of it should be completed at the weekend.

Then it will be up to crews on the rig to get anchor chain back in place ready for sea duty next week.

Third well in the exploration program will start at a site to be named—somewhere off Long Beach.

A north Vancouver Island copper mine owned 51 per cent by Mitsubishi Metal Mining Co. since 1965 has shut down with ore reserves depleted after 22 months of operation.

It is the Yreka property on Neroutsos Inlet at the head of Quatsino Sound where Mitsubishi and Yreka (49 per cent) operated Minoca Mines Ltd., using a 300-tons-per-day mill.

A spokesman for the company said the ore ran out and attempts to locate further reserves failed.

The mill shut down two weeks ago, he said.

Meanwhile Minoca is negotiating with Peso Silver Mines Ltd. for possible sale of the mill.

Peso would like to dismantle the machinery and ship it to the Yukon for use at its Mount Nansen property 40 miles from Carmacks, where startup operations are planned before Sept. 1, 1968.

The price is expected to exceed $150,000 if an agreement is reached.

Yreka was paid in full—$500,000—for allowing Minoca to work the Vancouver Island claims.

Dosco Plant Draws Japanese Interest

TORONTO (CP)—Nova Scotia government officials are to meet early next week with representatives of a Japanese firm interested in the giant Dominion Steel Coal Corp. plant at Sydney, which is threatened with closure.

Dr. T. J. McKeough, Nova Scotia labor minister, made the announcement here Friday after day-long talks with T. J. Emmert, president of Hawker Siddeley (Canada) Ltd., Dosco's parent firm.

Mr. McKeough declined to give details on the site or exact date of the meeting but said the Japanese have been given a full dossier on the Sydney plant. He said the Japanese firm, not identified, had world-wide connections.

He said no further meetings are planned here with Hawker Siddeley officials but he expected other meetings would take place with the Dosco owners.

LEGAL ASPECTS

He said it was possible the government could persuade Dosco to keep the mill, which has been producing more than 1,000,000 tons of semi-finished steel annually, in production for even longer than a year or two.

"The company has explained its economic position to us," McKeough said. "We're sympathetic, but it's pretty hard to throw 3,200 people out of work. About 25,000 other jobs in the area are dependant on the mill."

He said Nova Scotia's solicitors were looking into the legal aspects of possible breach of contract by Dosco in its sudden decision to close the 60-year-old mill.

Dosco has said it plans to phase out the mill gradually by cancelling contracts starting immediately, so it would be ready for a complete shut-down April 30. Nova Scotia's proposal, which McKeough and two government colleagues were to present to Hawker Siddeley in writing Friday, was to postpone the cancellations, and the eventual shutdown of the mill, for four months.

McKeough refused to say anything about this proposal Friday.

Naval Salute Chosen

OTTAWA (CP) — Members of the army and air force may have to go back to boot training to learn a new salute.

The defence department said Friday it is trying out a brand new salute among recruits at bases in Cornwallis, Gagetown, Quebec, Petawawa, Kingston, London, Shilo, Calgary and Edmonton.

The only real change from the old salute is the position of the palm. It faces down in the new salute instead of outwards. That is the way the navy has saluted for years. It is also the way United States forces salute.

The department said no decision on adopting the new salute will be taken until next year.

Here's how the department describes the new salute:

"The salute is given with the upper arm horizontal, the forearm and hand at a 45-degree angle from the elbow and the palm facing downward, similar to the navy salute."

BANKRUPT FIRM HOPES TO PAY OFF IN FULL

TORONTO (CP)—It is hoped to pay off in full all creditors of Waite, Reid and Co., a bankrupt brokerage firm which did business in Toronto and Vancouver, a lawyer for the firm's trustee said Friday.

Jules Berman, acting for the trustee, Dunwoodco Ltd., said all proven claims against the firm will be paid as quickly as possible once an arrangement for payment has been made.

He said the Vancouver Stock Exchange is being asked to help in the quick release of securities now held by banks, and in payments to individual creditors of Waite, Reid.

U.S. Investment In Canada Sets Mark

WASHINGTON (CP) — U.S. investment in Canada last year rose by a record $1,617,000,000 or 13 per cent above the 1965 figure.

Direct investment totalled $16,840,000,000 at the end of 1966, $7,647,000,000 of it in manufacturing.

The U.S. total stake — assets and investment — in Canada is a record $27,529,000,000, or about one-quarter of the total U.S. international investment of $111,874,000,000.

The figures are contained in the commerce department's annual report on U.S. investment and assets abroad.

Meanwhile, Canada's total investment in the U.S. fell last year by $99,000,000 to $8,093,000,000.

The record growth in direct U.S. investment in Canada includes re-investment by existing American subsidiaries of $539,000,000, or virtually the same as 1966. The remaining $1,078,000,000 involves fresh capital flows from the U.S. despite the voluntary U.S. program to hold the line on such foreign investment.

Canadian subsidiaries provided earnings — before U.S. taxes but after Canadian ones — of $1,240,000,000. The report says this is an increase of only 2½ per cent, although investments rose by much more.

TIELD DOWN

The yield from all foreign investment was 11.5 per cent, compared with 12.3 per cent a year earlier. Total earnings were $5,680,000,000.

The book value of U.S. direct investment in Canada in selected industries, with 1965 totals bracketed:

All industries — $16,840,000,000 ($15,223,000,000); mining and smelting — $1,942,000,000 ($1,755,000,000); petroleum — $3,606,000,000 ($3,356,000,000); manufacturing — $7,674,000,000 ($6,872,000,000); other— $3,618,000,000 ($3,240,000000).

Canada's total remains the largest in direct investment of total assets plus investment but Western Europe's continues to fise more quickly.

The direct investment there is $16,200,000,000 or only $640,000,000 behind the Canadian total, compared with $6,691,000,000 just seven years earlier.

The Latin American total of $11,473,00,000 shows less growth as does the $10,049,000,000 listed for "other areas."

U.K. Debaters To Perform Here In November

Two British university students representing Glasgow and Oxford Universities will debate at the University of Victoria next month.

Hannan Rose of Oxford and Colin MacKay of Glasgow, both 23, will complete a seven-week Centennial debating tour of Canadian universities when they arrive here in the last week of November. Exact date has not been set.

They are being sponsored by the British Information Services.

Mr. Rose obtained his BA with first-class honors in philosophy, politics and economics from Nuffield College, Oxford, last year and is currently working toward his D. Phil. in sociology.

Mr. MacKay earned his masters degree with honors in English language and literature last year and is now studying for a diploma in education.

Both are experienced debaters.

Utica Operation Officially Opened

OSOYOOS (CP)—Utica Mines, potentially one of Canada's largest silver producers, was officially opened here Friday by B.C. Mines Minister Donald Brothers.

The mine site is located about 150 miles east of Vancouver and 15 miles west of this Okanagan Valley community.

Though company officials are not yet prepared to issue any estimated earnings, they've announced 320,000 tons of measured and indicated ore and 383,000 tons of "geologiacally inferred" ore, all averaging 20.1 ounces of silver per ton.

Utica's $1,500,000 mill, already in experimental production, is geared to handle 300 tons of ore daily.

First shipment of concentrates to the Cominco smelter at Trail was made Aug. 21.

In the current strong silver market, each ton is worth approximately $37 or a gross value for 300-ton daily production of $11,100 a day. Estimated yearly production should produce a gross value of more than $2,500,000.

LONG HISTORY

The company name dates back to 1892 when an Irish cook named Paddy McCue staked a claim near Kaslo and called it Utica after his old home town in New York State.

The company was reorganized in 1963 following a costly mining venture in Turkey. With financing arranged by former Toronto stock promoter Morris Black, Utica began serious exploitation of the property in 1964.

The original claims at the present mine site were staked in 1901 when it was known as Silver Horn. The property was mined for a time but abandoned in 1930.

Canadian Radium Corporation took the property over in 1958 and it was later acquired by Santos Silver Mines, which sold its interest to Utica for $76,500 in 1964.

Car Workers Win Rich Settlement

DETROIT (AP)—With most major pieces stitched into place, United Auto Workers' Union and Ford Motor Co. bargainers moved today to tie up the loose ends of a contract to end a strike now in its 45th day. It is the third-largest in auto history.

Already wrapped up, an industry source said, were enough bit items to make the package probably the largest settlement ever in the auto-making industry, possibly one of the richest ever in any industrial field.

But among the unresolved matters was the cost-of-living escalator clause, highly prized by the UAW.

UAW President Walter P. Reuther was thought to be striving for a few more improvements to bring to $1 an hour the value wage and fringe-benefit gains would have over the three-year contract period.

The source said Reuther already had won wage increases that would, over the three years, range from 43 to 59 cents for most workers and 79 to 95 cents for the 20,000 skilled tradesmen among the 160,000 strikers.

INCREASE GAINS

Tentative contract gains won by the union also included pensions and pay increases in the second and third years of the contract bigger than those provided in the last two years of the previous pact.

The source made no mention of whether Reuther had won another major union demand—pay parity in Canadian auto plants where workers get 35 cents less an hour than their counterparts in U.S. plants.

The Canadian parity issue has been a UAW demand since 1939, but never was pressed more vigorously than in pre-bargaining speeches this year.

The items won by the UAW, the source said, also included the 60-year-old union chief's pet project — guaranteed annual income, or a form of it.

The cost-of-living escalator increases or reduces the pay of workers according to movement in the cost-of-living index. During the last three years it added 18 cents to workers' hourly wage.

Reuther has said the UAW will allow "no tampering" with the clause, which the UAW originally won at General Motors in 1948.

The total value of the package can't be precisely determined because the cost-of-living index will fluctuate in the coming three years.

Reuther has said that the union wouldn't settle for less than a 5.6-per-cent gain in wages and fringe benefits—80 cents an hour over three years.

END 31-HOUR SESSION

The two sides ended late Friday a 31-hour bargaining session without confirming or denying details of tentatively-settled contract provisions as outlined by the industry source.

The UAW hopes to use the Ford contract as a pattern for settlement at General Motors and Chrysler where UAW members have continued to work although their contracts also expired Sept. 6.

Any agreement is subject to ratification by union members.

By Ford estimates, strikers have lost $170,000,000 in wages.

Sales of Ford cars in the first 10 days of this month fell 60,000 below the Ford sales total for the same period last year.

An industry spokesman said these details of the new contract have been tentatively agreed upon:

—An immediate wage increase of 20 cents an hour for all non-skilled workers. Under the old contract, the average straight-line wage for the industry as a whole was $3.41 an hour.

—An immediate wage increase of 50 cents an hour for skilled tradesmen.

—Additional wage increases of three per cent in each of the last two years of the proposed contract, up from 2.8 per cent in the old agreement.

—The proposed pact also increases by $1 to $5.25 the amount a retired worker receives monthly in pension for each year of service.

LOOKS AT SPORTS

Under "Momentous Events in Sport" or "A Motorcycle I Met" I want to tell you about a wonderful thing that happened to me this week.

I walked out to the carport and it was gone. Disappeared. Vanished. Kaput.

I was so excited I wanted to holler.

But I resisted the urge (I could imagine the neighbors calling the police: "Look, it's 6:30 a.m. and there's this old guy jumping up and down in his front yard and you better send the funny wagon"). Instead I merely snapped my garters twice and drove to work with a silly smile.

"It" was a motorcycle.

Now there are many different breeds of motorcycle and I know all about them. Doesn't everybody know that CC (as in 50 CC or 250 CC) doesn't stand for horsepower but "coronary companion"?

This particular was a well-built affair, sturdy in the chest and with a pretty fair snort coming out of its afterburners.

I didn't have any particular hawk or dove feelings toward it. (If a man wants to practice fracturing his leg under the guise of skiing, well let the fractures fall where they may.)

I did emote the occasional morning when I managed to fall over the thing. But that was nothing special—I emote practically every time I take up carpentry and miss the nail.

●

Generally speaking "it" and I went our separate ways.

"It" belonged to my eldest heir who espouses the adolescent philosophy that unless you feel the air in your face when you're driving you're not living in the 20th century.

My ignorantly blissful state was shattered one day when my son asked me if I would drive his beast from a friend's home to ours.

My first thought was total rejection. My physique may be an unimposing combination of bones and gristle with specific areas of overpadding but it is all I have and I would like to keep the parts where they belong.

But it hardly befits a man who would climb into a stock car and cruise around Western Speedway to be intimidated by a mere motorcycle. Besides my son is bigger than I am.

At the scene of the accident looking for a place to happen I was given a crash course in navigation and instrument flying.

"A child could drive this," I was told with what seemed a certain amount of derision.

"There are six gears; the clutch, gas and brakes are on the handlebars." Mentally I decided there were five gears I wouldn't worry about. This would be a slow trip in one gear, if I could find it.

●

The plan called for me to proceed up Arbutus from Beach followed by heir and his mother in the family chariot.

I must admit to feeling pretty racy aboard the beast even though the helmet was turning my ears inward.

I gunned the engine and the throb of those horses inflated my blood pressure. My son waved me on.

I had to come about 15 feet out of a gravel side road and make a right turn onto blacktop. I released the brake and let the machine slide slowly. Just as I reached the road proper I had to climb a small incline and the motor began to sputter.

To avoid the inevitable question which would follow if the bike stalled—"Been driving long, Pop?"—I let the clutch out, put it into low gear and gave it gas.

The result was akin to Nero's memorable words . . . "A funny thing happened to me on the way . . ."

The front end stood upright and the rest followed in full-throated flight. With my back parallel to the road and the knuckles on my hands chalk white I sensed something had gone wrong.

●

Before I could make adjustments the bike and I proceeded full bore some 75 yards.

Finally the nose came down and bounced on the road thrusting me forward. This caused my wrists (which control the clutch and gas) to roll forward nearly shutting the plant down.

I wasn't burdened with concern that it might stall (in fact I was rather hoping it would). So I leaned back in the saddle.

Oops! I forgot that in so doing I pulled my wrists back, setting everything in motion again.

Potential survivors—witnesses claim the bike and I went through the vertical takeoff—sudden descent drill three times. All I remember is wishing somebody would stop the world so I could get off.

I did get off.

Not in the recommended fashion.

On the fourth free flight I departed from the road and commenced what Boy Scouts describe as "breaking trail."

Several sizeable trees were left shaking in their stumps and assorted lesser foliage was obliterated as I cruised through the bush.

●

Finally I caromed off a rock and headed in the direction of Cadboro Bay while the bike took a southwest tack.

Now the bike has been sold.

No longer can I rap my shins on its lurking hulk in the driveway or recall our relationship known in the family as The Charge of the Light(headed) Brigade."

In case you're wondering, I didn't fracture a hair that memorable day.

As I lay there studying entire equestrial galaxies spinning by, my heir hastened to the scene.

He gave me a cursory look and then, examining his prized possession, entangled in weeds, said: "Darn it. The key broke off in the ignition."

Oh, well, you can't win them all.

Unbeaten Barons Clip Canucks 3-2

By The Associated Press

The scene was set today for a clash between the only undefeated team in the Western Hockey League and the only team in the American Hockey League with an unblemished record.

The site will be the Seattle Coliseum where the defending champion Totems will host the Cleveland Barons, leaders in the AHL's western division. Cleveland is 4-0 and the Totems, who will be seeking their 27th win at home in 29 games, are 3-0.

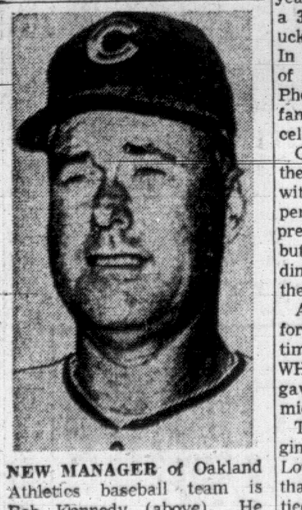
The Barons began a swing through the WHL under this year's interlocking schedule with a 3-2 win over Vancouver Canucks in overtime Friday night. In the only other WHL action of the night, San Diego edged Phoenix 4-3 before 12,219 home fans to climb out of the league cellar.

Cleveland's Doug Senior got the winning goal at Vancouver with 3:52 gone in the overtime period. The Canucks kept the pressure up throughout the game but Baron goalie Gerry Desjardins made 38 saves to keep them at bay.

Al Nicholson carried the load for San Diego, scoring three times for the third hat trick in WHL play this season. His goals gave the Gulls a 3-1 lead by the mid-point of the second period.

The Roadrunners cut the margin before the period ended and Lou Jankowski's shot with less than a minute gone in the third tied the count. Johnny MacMillan got the Gulls their first win on a breakaway with just 16 seconds left in the game.

The Gulls travel to Phoenix tonight for another go at the Roadrunners.



NEW MANAGER of Oakland Athletics baseball team is Bob Kennedy (above). He signed two-year contract Friday to take over from Alvin Dark, fired last August. Franchise of American League team was transferred from Kansas City earlier this week.

NEW GENERATION ON WAY . . . . . . PENTICTON HERE TONIGHT

National Coach Touts Taggart

JACKIE McLEOD

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Ouch!

After a second thought, maybe this new B.C. Junior Hockey League is NOT such a good idea after all.

That's because—goodness to grey hairs—it brings in a new generation. And who wants to be reminded of passing years?

It seemed only yesterday when Jack Taggart was bouncing bodies on behalf of Lethbridge Maple Leafs in the old Western Canada Senior League . . . Ollie Dorohoy was cutting ice for New Westminster Royals . . . and Tony Leswick, fresh out of Saskatoon, was insulting bigger bodies in the National League . . . So was Red Carr.

Now some of the surnames are the same.

There's an Allan Dorohoy (Ollie's boy) playing for New Westminster along with Tony Leswick's son, Gene Carr is with Penticton along with Jack Taggart, Jr.

The new league makes its debut at Memorial Arena tonight—Victoria Cougars vs. Penticton Broncos, at 8:30—and the advance word is one that whispers kind things about Taggart.

He is the 17-year-old defenceman who so impressed Jack McLeod that Taggart was invited to accompany Canada's national team to a four-country world tournament in Grenoble, France, last week.

McLeod, the Nat's coach, recently tagged Taggart as "a terrific prospect."

"It's hard to believe that a young boy can be so good," said McLeod. "I really think he can make the national team next season.

"Jack has the finesse and moves of a great player at such a young age. He has hockey sense, at 17, that takes other players years to develop."

The unassuming Taggart, at 16, was one of the standouts who carried New Westminster Royals to the Abbott Cup (Western Canada Junior) title last spring.

The Penticton lad is committed to toil for Broncos the balance of this season, but McLeod makes no secret of the fact that he would like to see the defenceman enroll at University of Manitoba next year.

After missing last week's home openers, including a 5-3 victory over the Cougars, Taggart is back in Penticton. For that reason, the Broncs have reason to beam.

Ben Won't Reveal Why Arnie Benched

HOUSTON (AP) — Arnold Palmer was on the bench when U.S. golf professionals went out to try to widen their 5½-2½ lead over the British today in the second phase of the 17th biennial Ryder Cup matches.

Palmer, one of the stars in America's strong start Friday in the two-ball foursomes, was surprisingly dropped from the lineup for the four morning four-ball tests although slated to return to action in the afternoon.

The decision was made by U.S. captain, Ben Hogan, who didn't think it was necessary to give an explanation.

"He is not playing because I say so," Hogan told a news conference. "I am the captain and I say who plays."

A reporter asked if there were reasons.

"Yep," said Hogan.

"May I ask what they are?" the reporter pressed.

"You may ask, but I don't have to tell you," Hogan replied.

BOROS ALSO OUT

In addition to Palmer, the world's all-time leading money winner, Hogan also ordered the 47-year-old Julius Boros to sit out the morning matches.

The schedule was this: Bill Casper-Gay Brewer, U.S. vs. Peter Alliss-Christy O'Connor, Britain; Bobby Nichols-Johnny Pott, U.S. vs. Neil Coles-Bernard Hunt, Britain; Gene Littler-Al Geiberger, U.S. vs. Dave Thomas-Tony Jacklin, Britain; Doug Sanders-Gardner Dickinson, U.S. vs. Brian Huggett-George Will, Britain.

Four matches with revised lineups follow in the afternoon. The series, which the United States has lost only three times in 40 years, ends with 16 singles matches Sunday.

Thers's no question who is boss of the American team. It's Hogan, the tough little four-time U.S. Open champion from Fort Worth, Tex.

HOGAN THE BOSS

Hogan has become the militant captain, pushing the Professional Golfers Association brass to the sidelines in the conduct of the team. So far it's worked well.

Palmer and Gardner Dickinson won two matches Friday, beating O'Connor and Alliss 2 and 1 and then trouncing young Malcolm Gregson and Hugh Boyle 5 and 4. Palmer made a fantastic shot out of the woods for the key shot of the morning match. Fine putting by Dickinson won the second.

Pott and Nichols also won two points, beating Hunt and Coles 6 and 5 and Alliss and O'Connor 2 and 1. The other U.S. full point came on a 1-up victory by Boros and Casper over Will and Huggett, who played the same pair to a standstill for a half in the morning.

Jacklin and Thomas were Britain's heroes, winning twice. They beat Sanders and Brewer 4 and 3 and Littler and Geiberger 3 and 2. Jacklin is Britain's 23-year-old rookie.

Bitterness Marks Firing of Snider

PHILADELJHIA (AP)—A rift between Ed Snider and general manager-coach Joe Kuharich apparently is one of the reasons which provoked owner Jerry Wolman to fire Snider Thursday as operating head of the National Football League's Philadelphia Eagles.

The bitterness between Kuharich and Snider broke out during a news conference Friday night after Snider, Wolman and co-owner Earl Foreman met for 45 minutes and failed to resolve their dispute over Snider's dismissal.

Kuharich started the exchange when he needled Snider during the questioning:

"I'm enjoying this," said the coach from his position behind reporters.

The grim looking Snider snapped: "Maybe next time it will be your party Joe."

ON 15-YEAR PACTS

The repartee started when Foreman, executive vice-president and secretary as well as a 48 per cent stockholder in the Eagles, disclosed that Snider had a 15-year contract with the club. Asked when it was dated, Foreman said he believed it was 1965.

Kuharich interrupted to say it was 1964, "the same year I got mine." Kuharich is in the fourth year of a 15-year contract.

Earlier, while Snider, Wolman and Foreman, the Eagles board of directors, were closed in an effort to resolve their difference, Kuharich ripped Snider.

"This crowd (reporters) is ridiculous," Kuharich snapped. "I've never seen anything so ludicrous.

"This is like me waiving Ed Van Pelt or Dean Wink. It has less significance. You're here for nothing. If I got fired there'd be two people here."

ALSO IN HOCKEY

"Sam Baker walked in this morning (and Kuharich imitated the Eagles' placekicker adjusting his tie) and said, 'I hear there's an executive position open. Do you think I qualify?'

"Why is everyone so surprised? The guy (Snider) spends 60 per cent of his time with the hockey team. Snider is president of the Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League. What's he doing for the Eagles? You only get a couple of hours work out of him a day. He comes in at 12 o'clock. What's the big deal? What's the surprise?"

Foreman said the second meeting Friday produced no definitive statement. He said they would meet again sometime next week.

Before the night meeting, Foreman and Snider sought advice from NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle. Rozelle declined to say what he told the two Eagles' executives. He said it was a club problem.

Neither the 34-year-old Snider, nor Foreman, a Washington attorney, would say what caused the rift that prompted Wolman to fire his executive vice-president and secretary.

Butch Coming Along Well

OTTAWA (CP)—Former hockey star Emile (Butch) Bouchard, injured Tuesday in a traffic accident here, remained in satisfactory condition in hospital today.

Bouchard, 47, suffered a concussion and was experiencing chest pains and a headache today, said Dr. W. F. Cormier, medical director of St. Louis de Montfort Hospital.

"Until now we have discovered no serious injuries," Dr. Cormier said. The former Montreal Canadiens defenceman is expected to be released in a day or two "and he'll have to rest for a while."

Claremont Team Tops Cross-Country Event

Oak Bay runners grabbed the top three places Friday but Claremont collected its first team triumph in major high school cross-country competition.

Dave Weicker completed the three-mile race in 15 minutes, 22 seconds to take individual honors and was followed by schoolmates Gordon Ackerman and Brian Harding.

Under the reverse system of scoring, Claremont had 36 points while Oak Bay finished with 50. Mount Douglas (90 points) was third, Esquimalt (91) was fourth and Edward Milne (119) was fifth. Vic High did not field a team.

Giving Claremont first place was the strong running of Dale Stewart, Robert Irving, Jim Barker, Jim Cunning and Steve Parkes, who finished fourth, sixth, seventh, ninth and 10th.

LACQUER WINS CAMBRIDGESHIRE

NEWMARKET, England (CP)—Lacquer won the 1⅛ miles of the Cambridgeshire Handicap today with Straight Master second and Mrs. C. O. Iselin's American-owned Wolver Hollow taking third.

Lacquer, ridden by Australian Ron Hutchinson, came with a late run in the last 50 yards and landed the first prize of $14,457 for British owner R. Moller.

The race carried the last Irish Sweeptakes of the season and added up to a small fortune for the lucky holders of winning tickets.

Thirty-four thoroughbreds started in the race, first run in 1839 and rated one of the biggest gambles on British turf tracks.

Lacquer, a three-year-old bay filly by Shantung out of Urshalim, was a 20-1 betting shot with Straight Master 40-1 and Wolver Hollow 33-1. Cumshaw, 66-1, was fourth.

COMPUTERIZED SERIES . . . . . . TO NAME CHAMP

Ring Debates Revived

Computerized clouting is stirring up old arguments among boxing fans across the continent.

The man responsible for fanning new life into old debates—like could Jack Dempsey have whipped Joe Louis?; was Bob Fitzsimmons better than Jack Johnson?; or how would Cassius Clay have fared against Jim Jeffries or John L. Sullivan?—is Murry Woroner, who has made his company in Miami, Fla., the world's largest producer of radio programs.

"We're going to find the all-time heavyweight champion," said Woroner, "and we'll take 15 pounds to do it."

★ ★ ★

Woroner and his associates are doing it—computer style—but you'll have to wait a while to learn who is the electronic king of the ring.

First of all, 100 sports experts in the United States were asked to rate the leading heavyweights in boxing history, considering no fewer than 129 variables per man, including speed, stamina, reach, weight, abilities with different punches, infighting skill and courage.

Woroner selected the top 16 punchers picked by the poll, set up the formula for a dramatized elimination tournament and turned loose a research team to collect tens of thousands more pieces of pugilistic information on the poll favorites.

★ ★ ★

All the data was poured into a heavyweight among computers—the NCR 315, which has 160,000 memory positions—and out came names of probable winners and probable patterns of fights.

This formed the basis for the electronic version of the "all-time heavyweight elimination tournament and championship title fight" series which is currently being aired each Monday night over a large number of radio stations in Canada and the United States, including Victoria's CJVI.

Starting in September, with Guy Le Bow doing the blow-by blow, the weekly series has now eliminated six famous fighters and will name an all-time champ sometime in December.

★ ★ ★

Next on the list is a battle between Jim Jeffries and Joe Walcott. Max Schmeling will swap fictional punches with Cassius Clay in the final first-round bout.

If you believe in computers, some arguments have already been settled because Dempsey beat Jim Corbett, Sullivan whipped Jim Braddock, Louis defeated Jess Willard, Fitzsimmons beat Jack Sharkey, Max Baer out-punched Johnson and Rocky Marciano overpowered Gene Tunney.

Next come Walcott and Jeffries and there's no use trying to learn results in advance. Names of winners are carefully guarded secrets and only five men are said to know how the tourney turns out.

★ ★ ★

However, if you still believe in computers by then, you can learn the name of the best heavyweight of all time in about eight weeks.

Broncs Bustle To Junior Lead

Victoria Cougars will be up against the leaders when they open their home portion of the B.C. Junior Hockey League at Memorial Arena tonight. That would be Penticton Broncos.

The Broncs took over sole possession of first place Friday night in Penticton, drubbing Kamloops 8-2. Until then, five of the league's six teams shared the lead.

In another game Friday, six goals in the third period carried Kelowna Buckaroos to a 9-5 win over Vernon Essos. It was Kelowna's first victory.

Ed Hays, Bob Mowat and Garry Smith paced the Broncos' attack with two goals apiece. Other Penticton marksmen were Wayne Schaab and Adrian Blais.

Ken Tarnow and Gerry Janicki replied for Kamloops during a brief flurry in the second period when the visitors threatened to overcome a 3-0 Bronco first-period edge.

Also providing a kick to the Broncos' attack was Jackie Taggart, who figured in three scoring plays in his first game since returning from Grenoble, France, with the Canadian national squad.

At Kelowna, Nanaimo-raised Gene Carr, son of a former National Hockey League performer, sparked Buckaroos with four goals and one assist.

Jim Robertson scored one goal and assisted on five others in the high-scoring third period. Bobby Muir added two goals while Cliff McKay and Pat McMahon added singles for the Buckaroos.

Kelowna's six-goal outburst began at the 6:30 mark of the period when Vernon held a 4-3 lead. Just eight minutes later Kelowna held a 9-4 lead.

TIMBERMEN TACKLE . . . . . . OAK BAY CLUB

Cowichan Fans Eager

If eager fans' support helps win football games, Cowichan Timbermen should have a lot going for them Sunday at Duncan.

Timbermen tangle with Oak Bay Farmer Construction for the playoff championship of the Vancouver Island Junior Football League and Cowichan supporters predict they'll have about 1,000 fans on hand to cheer their favorites at the Cowichan High School field.

Farmers will also have a flock of followers and it is shaping up as quite a struggle. On their way to the league title, Timbermen handed Oak Bay two defeats but in the opening game of the two-game, total-points final last Sunday, Farmers held their rivals to an 8-8 deadlock.

When the game to decide which club will advance into the provincial final starts at 2 p.m., it could be viewed one of the largest crowds in Duncan's sports history.

PROTECTIVE EQUIPMENT DIDN'T PROTECT JOHN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Roseboro, catcher of Los Angeles Dodgers, was awarded $20,000 damages Thursday for injuries suffered when his face mask was hit by a foul tip.

The 34-year-old catcher had asked for $25,000 from Rawlings Manufacturing Co. He said the injury occurred in a game April 29, 1962, when a foul tip off the bat of Pittsburgh Pirate Dick Stuart struck the face mask. The bars of the mask gave way, one of them striking Roseboro's right eye. He did not return to the Dodger lineup until May 10 of that year, he said.

The jury brought back a 9-3 decision after 90 minutes of deliberation.

Viking Rookie Trips Stockers

Wayne Hodgson closed the door in the final two periods at Esquimalt Sports Centre Friday night and pushed North Americans out of the comfortable first-place berth in the Vancouver Island Hockey League.

Hodgson, the 19-year-old rookie goalie with University of Victoria Vikings, blocked 17 shots without a miss in the last two periods and Vikings snapped a 1-1 deadlock to down Stockers 4-1.

Vikings, who played to a 2-2 tie with Tudor Monarchs in their opening game last week, were forced to share the lead when the Monarchs rambled to a 6-1 victory over Queen's Own Rifles in the other game of Friday's doubleheader.

Paul Bion sparked Vikings with two goals and an assist. Nick Nicoletti and Bill Rudyk also counted for the students.

THREE-GOAL EFFORT

There was some extra excitement for the 1,176 fans when George Fuller of Vikings and Murray Sotheran of Stockers tangled in a third-period fight that added major sentences to minor sentences incurred in a scuffle that preceded the fighting.

Held to a 1-1 tie in the first period, Monarchs broke loose against the Rifles in the last two periods. Wayne Anderson, with three goals, and Ray Gregoire, with two, scuttled the army squad.

Louisville Buys Toronto Franchise

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Louisville, Ky., is back in professional baseball after a four-year absence.

Louisville became the eighth member of the International League when the directors in a meeting here this week accepted a bid of $65,000 for the franchise relinquished by Toronto.

The buyer is Walter Dilbeck of Evansville, Ind., a realtor who has business interests in Louisville.

OLYMPIC PROBLEMS

Travel Agents Hit by Critics

MEXICO CITY (CP) — The Soviet Union, East Germany and Poland won the three gold medals at stake at the pre-Olympic Games Friday.

Russia's gold was captured by Ian Talts, a hefty 23-year-old university student who smashed his own clean-and-jerk world mark for middle-heavy weighlifters en route to victory.

East Germany's Helmer Artelt won the free pistol shooting event and Poland's Adam Lisewski downed Hungary's Sandor Szabo in the men's individual foil final.

Talts hefted 194 kilos—427 4/5 pounds—to better by half a kilo his old clean-and-jerk mark while compiling a total of 492.5 kilos—just under 1,086 pounds. It was the seventh record broken in weightlifting here and there may be more tonight when the heavyweight lifters have their innings.

Geza Toth of Hungary, second in the 1964 Olympics, took the silver medal with a total lift of 485 kilos—1,070 2/5 pounds. The bronze went to Marek Golab of Poland.

Artelt gave East Germany its third goal medal when he scored 560 points out of a possible 600 in the 50-metre free pistol shoot.

Lisewski, a lanky, bearded, bespectacled Pole, defeated Szabo 5-1 in the 3¼-hour men's foil final.

Poland now has seven gold medals, the same as Japan, with the United States next in line with four.

Some Accommodation Difficulties

Friday's program was lighter than usual and Mexican officials used the lull to discuss a couple of problems.

Pedro Ramirez Vazquez, president of Mexico's Olympic organizing committee, had an explanation for the long delays in announcing official results. He said too many participating countries had turned in their lists of athletes at the last minute, giving the statistical staff little time to get ready.

And Ramon Alatorre, chief of the Olympic lodging control office talked about complaints from the United States, Europe and as far away as Australia about the difficulty of reserving accommodation for the 1968 Olympics here next October.

Protests had been received that tourist agents were trying to push the sale of expensive package tours, covering dates outside the two weeks of the Olympics and including side tours to museums, pyramids and distant cities.

"We have no control over the travel agencies," said Alatorre. "We told them some five-day packages and some 21-day packages.

"We suppose they have only the more expensive packages left."

The Mexican government is controlling all available hotel rooms in Mexico City for 24 days during the Olympic period. The guests must be charged only approved rates, ranging from $4 to $20 daily a person, U.S. funds.

With his hotel rooms all under government control, one hotelman reports he plans to ask permission to lodge his regular guests on the roof, under a tarpaulin.

Goalies Sharp As Five Clubs Stay in Chase

Goaltenders grabbed the spotlight Friday as the race for two playoff places in the Inter-High School Soccer League remained a five-team struggle.

Four netminders chalked up shutouts when forwards managed just three goals in three matches and when the day's booting was over only Esquimalt could be counted out of the battle for positions that will send two clubs into a final for the Colonist Cup.

Esquimalt bowed for the seventh time in seven starts, dropping a 2-0 decision at home to Mount Douglas.

Victoria High Tyees had their lead sliced to two points when they were held to a scoreless draw by the Hornets at Mount View while Oak Bay was scrambling to a 1-0 triumph over Claremont at Oak Bay.

GAME MONDAY

Oak Bay is two points back of the Tyees and two points ahead of Mount Douglas and Mount View but the Oaks may be forced to share the runner-up berth after Monday, when Mount Douglas and Mount View clash to make up a postponed game.

Tyees had a good share of good fortune in holding the Hornets to a draw. Mount View supporters believed their club had scored twice but on one occasion a linesman ruled the ball did not cross the line and on another the play was called back for offside.

Hornets had more of the ball and Vic High goalie Kjeld Brodsgaard needed strong defensive efforts by his backs to earn his shutout. However, like Hornet netminder Graham Lee, Brodsgaard came up with some fine saves.

Claremont missed a great chance to come away with a draw when Ross Clague failed to score on a penalty kick. Glen Myles connected for the Oak Bay tally on a play with Peter Mason and Bob Fish.

On the way to his shutout, Oak Bay goalie Tom Holmes turned aside dangerous shots from Clague and Ted Clark.

Both goals at Esquimalt came in the second half with John Howe and Darryl Hooker finding the net to provide Mount Douglas with the victory.

Joining ranks of winners in Times-sponsored Bowler-of-the-Week competition is Wes Vogler, 189 Maddock West. Wes, a B.C. Telephone Company employee, rolled games of 261, 301 and 338 for 900 total in Mixed Classic League at Gibson's Recreations to top men's fivepin division.

DISTAFF DIVOTS

Button Battles Hold Spotlight

Partnership competitions held the spotlight in feminine flailing during the past week at Victoria-area golf courses.

Emma Silverberg divided the spoils at Glen Meadows. The club champion captured the weekly medal round with a net 82 but lost her share of the club buttons. Barbara Glassford and Freddie Bolton snatched the jewelry by defeating Mrs. Silverberg and Andy Drew on the 17th hole.

The match wrapped up button battles for the season and left Marg Robertson as the leading winner with seven victories, one more than Mrs. Silverberg.

Nora O'Connell and Gert Pumfrey retained their grasp on the Gorge Vale buttons by fashioning a triumph over Peggy O'Connell and Clara Johnson on the 14th. They had captured the buttons earlier by downing Jean Whittingham and Irene Horne.

Rosalie Roberts and Elizabeth Carroll earned part of the spoils in the annual Gorge mixed tourney for the Kirkham Brooches. Miss Roberts teamed with Bill Whittingham to take first place with Mrs. Carroll and Mike Warawa finishing in the runner-up spot.

M. Osborough chalked up a double win at Victoria Golf Club, leading the first round of the Benning Cup contest and topping a medal event with a net 71. E. MacPherson (net 80) was the "B" division leader.

At Uplands division winners in a par competition were Kay Liddell (2 up), May Nugent (even) and Eileen Briggs (even).

Members of the Victoria club will play a medal round Tuesday with players starting at the following times:

Oak Bay Stretches Field Hockey Skein

Oak Bay scored its fifth successive victory Thursday in the Inter-High School Girls' Field Hockey League, downing Victoria High 3-0 at Vic High.

In another league tussle, Esquimalt blanked Mount Douglas 2-0 at the Mount Douglas field.

NEW ERA . . . . . . COMMENCES TONIGHT

UVIC STANDS TALL

A new era for the University of Victoria unfolds tonight and athletic director Bob Bell can tick off at least two reasons why his collegians "should come out with heads high."

The tallest reasons are Tom Hatcher and Doug Hannan, a pair of education students listed as among the starters for Uvic when Jayvees say—for the first time—"howdy" to the Inter-City Junior Men's Basketball League.

Introduction, with Victoria's Chinooks at the other end of the floor, takes place at Oak Bay Senior Secondary gymnasium, starting at 8.

Hatcher, starting centre with Burnaby South High last season, is six-foot, 4½ inches. Hannan, a Claremont grad, is six-six.

They give Jayvees the much-needed height and the threat of a strong attack for Uvic's ICJBL debut.

Rounding out Uvic's starting team are Stan Piper, Trev Cook and John Levering. Also on the squad, which coach Charlie Granewall rates as a "well-balanced" one, are Jim Crawford, Bob Buckner, Lorne Lazzarotto, Tom Sallaway and Cliff Emery.

Dawson Memorial Dedicated on Sunday

A memorial to Percy H. B. Dawson—founder of Twilight Homes Ltd. at Cedar Hill Road and Cedar Hill Cross Road—will be dedicated on the site by Archbishop Harold Sexton on Sunday at 12:15 p.m.

Donated by the directors of Twilight Homes, the memorial is a granite column bearing an inscription, with a sundial mounted on top.

Mr. Dawson died on Aug. 16, 1962, at the age of 86. The homes he fathered and developed—largely with his own money—now provide dwellings for 115 senior citizens.

He promoted the enterprise after a study of conditions among elderly persons in the area and became president of Twilight Homes Ltd. in 1949.

He was a trustee of the Anglican Foundation, which helped provide pensions for clergymen and funds for church missions, and was associated with many other charities.

Mr. Dawson was warden emeritus of St. Mary's Anglican Church, Oak Bay, and in 1958 was one of a number of Victorians awarded Centennial Good Citizenship medals in Beacon Hill Park.

A former chartered accountant, he came to Canada from Northamptonshire, England, and lived at Fort William, Ont., for many years.

He came to live in Victoria in 1944.

St. Luke's To Celebrate 107th Birthday

The Anglican parish of St. Luke, Cedar Hill and Cedar Hill Cross Road, will celebrate its 107th anniversary Sunday.

The first service in this area was conducted by Bishop William Hills on Aug. 10, 1860. The first church was opened on Oct. 25, 1862, and the present edifice was opened on June 7, 1888. The communion vessels used at the first service in 1860 and the bell that was rung at the opening of the first church are still in use.

St. Luke's has been called the "mother church of Saanich." Out of its original district have been formed the parishes of St. Michael, Royal Oak; St. Alban's, Ryan Street; St. George's, Cadboro Bay; St. David's, Cordova Bay; St. Dunstan's, Gordon Head and St. Peter's, Lake Hill.

THOSE WHO SERVED

Many well-known clergy have served the parish, including Bishop Garrett of Dallas, Texas (the first rector), Bishop G. A. Wells of Cariboo, Archdeacon H. A. Collison, Archdeacon Robert Connell, Canon Frederick Pike and Archdeacon T. D. B. Ragg of Huron Diocese.

The present rector, Archdeacon C. E. F. Wolff, will conduct the Sunday services and the preacher at the morning service will be the Most Rev. H. E. Sexton, Archbishop of British Columbia.

Cleric Pushes Suicide Bureaus

VANCOUVER (CP) — The man who turned a personal one-man suicide prevention service into a world-wide operation involving 10,000 volunteers wants to start a similar service in Vancouver.

Rev. Chad Varah of London said in an interview here that Vancouver should have his kind of suicide prevention service and he would like to start one in the city.

"Every city should have this service and Vancouver is no exception," the 55-year-old minister said.

His group, called the Samaritans, operate telephone answering services in more than 30 countries around the world.

A volunteer answers calls to the group's advertised number and talks to the potential suicide victim.

"The caller finally realizes that someone, the volunteer in this case, really cares if he dies. The caller fells wanted often for the first time in his life."

Mr. Varah said this is the most sensible alternative to the biggest cause of suicide which he called loneliness.

Mr. Varah stopped briefly in Vancouver before leaving for a Suicide Prevention Convention in Los Angeles.

He arrived from Toronto where the first Canadian Samaritan service begins with 60 volunteers Nov. 1.

Four Choirs At St. John's

Four city choirs will take part in a Royal School of Church Music Festival in St. John's Anglican Church Saturday, Oct. 28, at 7 p.m.

Occasion is the Festal Evensong of Saint Simon and Saint Jude, held under the patronage of Archbishop Harold Sexton of British Columbia.

Choirs participating are those of St. Barnabas, St. John's, St. Mary the Virgin and St. Peter's.

VICTORIAN TO EDIT CHURCH MAGAZINE

Bob Nelson, director of Christian education at First United Church since 1964, is leaving for Toronto next week to become editor of a new church magazine.

"It will be a United Church publication directed to junior and senior secondary school students," he said. "We haven't decided on a title as yet, but we know pretty well what the format will be.

"A paper of this kind offers a real challenge and I'm looking forward to it."

The church board will meet next week to decide on Mr. Nelson's successor.

TRICKERY IN TOMB RULED OUT

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Church Editor

Is there any relationship between stage trickery and the resurrection of Christ from the tomb?

"No," says Andre Kole, famed U.S. magician who put on a display for University of Victoria students during the Friday noon hour.

Mr. Kole put on a dazzling display of trickery for 300 students packing the Education Art Building. He took money from students' pockets which was never there before; he plucked money out of thin air and he fitted a kitchen tap to a student's forehead and made water run out of it.

Then, with an abrupt change of mood, he said:

TWO-TON STONE

"No magician alive could have made Jesus Christ rise from the tomb after His crucifixion. There was a two-ton stone over the tomb and 16 Roman soldiers stood guard to see that the body wasn't stolen."

Mr. Kole, a native of Mesa, Arizona, said he had been practising magic since he was seven years old and, after leaving high school, worked at it 12 hours a day.

At 25 he was an established magician; co-owner of a ranch in Arizona and a partner in many enterprises.

"But there was still something lacking in my life and I got a severe jolt when two of my friends in show business — successful men at that committed suicide.

ACCEPT MOST

"I began asking myself where I was going. I read the Bible and I found I could accept most of what was written about the life of Jesus.

"But, as a magician, I had difficulty believing in his resurrection from the tomb. No physical logic could explain it and no magician could present it without stage trickery.

"It was only possible because Christ was much more than a mortal—he was the Son of God."

Mr. Kole said the miracle of the tomb was only part of his conversion to Christ.

"Christianity means much more than triumph over physical obstacles," he said. "It is a way of life that opens new horizons to happier living.

"I am not a theologian or a clergyman. I am a professional magician, but I have found a sense of peace and strength and purpose through Christ."

RAPT SILENCE

The university students laughed frequently during Mr. Kole's display of magic, but listened in rapt silence when he gave his Gospel message.

"I was impressed by his argument for Christianity," one student said, "but I didn't feel his argument about the resurrection was very convincing. He gave no facts in support of it."

Mr. Kole's visit was sponsored by the Christian Businessmen's Committee International, Victoria Chapter.

He gave a performance in Lansdowne Junior Secondary School Friday night at which he appeared to saw a woman into three sections.

New Type Of Child Emerging

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Vancouver psychiatrist said Tuesday he has detected a new and dangerous type of child emerging as a sub-species of the new generation.

Taking his place alongside the hippies, Hersheys, freebies, hardrocks and greasers is "the teen-ager with psychopathic tendencies and the beginnings of a criminal mind," said Dr. Bennett Wong.

Dr. Wong was speaking to a YMCA meeting on the changing world of the pre-adult.

He said the new sub-species of youngsters are outwardly conformist in positions such as president of a student body but cannot feel love or respect and are out for their own gain and recognition.

"I am alarmed at seeing so many youngsters becoming psychopathic in their early teens," he said.

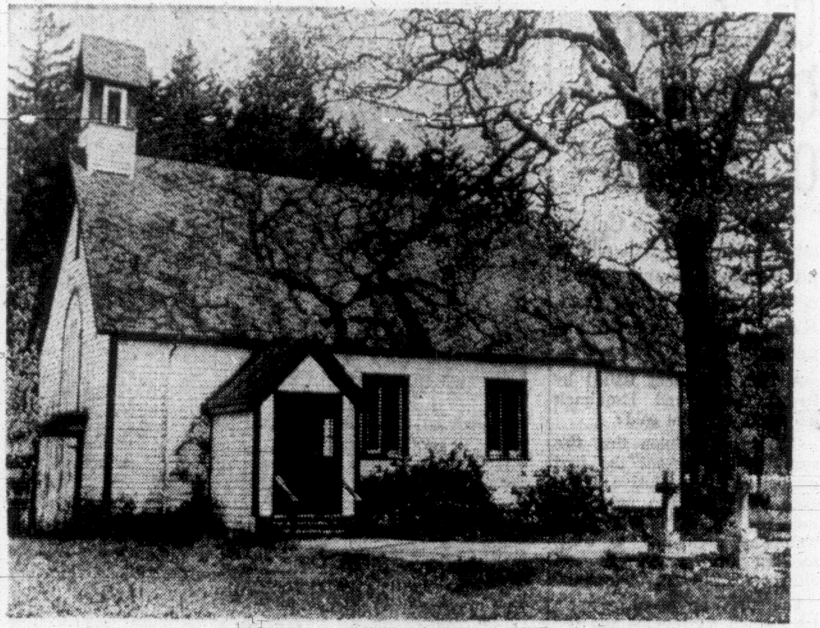
"There seems to be emerging a more dangerous type of child. Previously, you only found this type in the 18 to 21-year-old and older group."

Dr. Wong said the freebies are an evolutionary development of the hippies. They like to live in a non-materialistic, uncompetitive world with stress on individualism.

Hersheys are high school students who are ultra-conformist and the hardrocks and greasers are better known to adults as juvenile delinquents and vandals, he said.

THIRD OLDEST

St. Mary Marks Its 94th Year



St. Mary The Virgin Anglican Church . . . part of Metchosin's history

Standing serenely among the sturdy Garry oaks of Metchosin, the little Anglican church of St. Mary the Virgin will celebrate its 94th anniversary Sunday.

Archdeacon Cecil Swanson, rector of St. Mary's from 1918 to 1921, will preach the anniversary sermon at the 11 a.m. service and will speak at a roast beef dinner in the parish hall Monday at 6:30 p.m.

He has been invited to return to his old parish by the present rector, Rev. Cyril Venables.

"Since ministering here, Archdeacon Swanson has had a notable career in Vancouver and other large cities," Mr. Venables said.

St. Mary's is the third oldest Anglican church in continuous use on Vancouver Island and has been a distinctive community church ever since it came into being in 1873.

Religious services were begun as early as 1862 but it was not until 1871 that they were conducted regularly, first once a month, then every other Sunday.

The gift of two acres of land from John Witty of Bilston Farm enabled the parish to proceed with establishment of a permanent place of worship.

The list of subscriptions to the building fund was headed by Sir James Douglas with a donation of $100.

Mrs. George Hills, wife of the Bishop of Columbia, laid the foundation stone on July 24, 1873, in the presence of B.C. Lieutenant-Governor Joseph Trutch. The church was consecrated by Bishop Hills on Oct. 22 of that year, assisted by the first vicar, Rev. F. B. Gribbell.

One of the perennial charms of St. Mary's is the carpet of white Easter lilies and wild flowers which spreads through the rustic churchyard every spring.

Pope on Spot As Reformists Beat at Door

VATICAN CITY (AP)—The currents of change set loose in the Roman Catholic church by the Vatican ecumenical council converged in a torrent this week on Pope Paul's doorstep.

The upheaval in the two years since the end of the council came to a head in two parallel assemblies—the Synod of Bishops and the World Congress of Laymen.

The two assemblies could be compared with upper and lower houses of a church parliament, established to advise the Pope.

Roman Catholic laymen from more than 100 countries put up a week-long clamor for more power alongside the church's once-aloof hierarchy of clerics.

The 200 bishops of the synod, which ends later this month, reviewed some of the burning issues raised by the council and projected themselves toward a greater role in church government.

At the centre of the swirl of ideas, declarations and demands for liberalization was Pope Paul.

The Pope is an absolute ruler. All the exhortations to quicken the modernization of the church—or to slow it down—eventually reach his desk. Criticism of policies or people in the Curia, the church headquarters, also gravitates to him.

When the bishops called for drastic liberalization of the rules on mixed marriages, their viewpoint coincided with that of Protestants who contend that a papal concession on the subject last year did not go far enough.

When the laymen's congress advocated that Roman Catholic couples be allowed to choose among the methods of birth control, it placed unprecedented pressure on the pontiff. For months he has delayed his decision on whether artificial contraception shall be permissible for Roman Catholics.

Around the Vatican the reaction to the two meetings varies.

Some think the Pope anticipated and welcomed the fiery speeches of the laymen and the deep-cutting debates of the synod. Some even say he hopes the assemblies will influence the conservatives who are so strong in the Curia.

Others say the 70-year-old Pope, deeply troubled by his role of mediator between the church's progressives and conservatives, did not expect the outspoken frankness of the assemblies.

Led by the Italians who predominate in the Curia, the conservatives are understandably unhappy about the clamor for change since it threatens their hold on the church's power structure.

But others, especially from northern Europe, view the questioning of church traditions as beneficial growing pains for the church and the papacy.

Canon Roars At Church War Hypocrisy

TORONTO (CP)—Christianity, pacificism and condemnation of American policy in Vietnam dominated Friday night's opening sessions of the third international teach-in at the University of Toronto.

A British theologian accused the Christian church of maintaining a set of rules for sex and marriage, but refusing to stick to its morals in questions of war and peace.

Canon Lewis John Collins, chancellor of St. Paul's Cathedral in London, said Christian support of any limited war is "the height of irresponsibility, if not wickedness."

The clergyman told 2,500 persons in Toronto's Varsity Arena that the church must concentrate on non-violence to redeem the world from war.

THE TURNING POINT

A chaplain in the Royal Air Force during the Second World War and now a pacifist, Canon Collins said he became convinced Christians should not take part in war after the bombing of Hiroshima in 1945.

Canon Collins, 62, is also chairman of a campaign for nuclear disarmament and head of a fund providing legal aid for victims of apartheid in South Africa.

Twenty years after Hiroshima, he said, disarmament discussions still drag on, churches hesitate, the United Nations weakens, and nations are proudly concerned with upholding national sovereignty whatever the cost.

Prof. Conor Cruise O'Brien, an Irish diplomat now teaching at New York University, said pacificism is a morality for saints while the world needs morality for ordinary men.

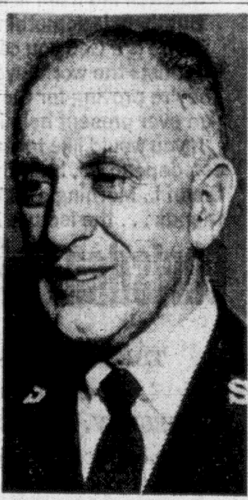
"It is no use in telling men whose homes are actually under attack that they must not defend them. . . Nor is it any use to tell the victims of actual and acute tyranny—the non-white inhabitants of South Africa for example—that they must rely on passive resistance.

The crowd of 2,500 applauded when Prof. O'Brien said the teach-in had no meaning without the speakers opinions on the Vietnam war.

Comparing the U.S. attempt to subdue the Viet Cong with the British attempt to defeat the U.S. rebels in 1776, Mr. O'Brien compared President Johnson to a man "horribly in love with high renown."

Dr. Kenneth W. Thompson, vice-president of the Rockefeller Foundation and a consultant to the U.S. state department on internatioal affairs, said the war-peace cycle is a fact of life.

In the last half century, the precarious peace has depended more and more on a balance of terror, he said.



HARBOR LIGHT superintendent Capt. Elfed Morgan is leaving here Sunday to take charge of the Salvation Army's alcoholic treatment centre at Miracle Valley, near Mission, B.C. "I want to thank the many Victoria people who have helped me in my work at the Harbor Light Corps," he said.

RECITAL of sacred music will be given after the Sunday Evensong in St. John's Anglican Church by Jill Paver, this year's festival winner in the soprano class at Greater Victoria Musical Festival. She is a soloist with the Amity Singers and a member of Victoria Choral Society and the University of Victoria choir and motet. She studied singing under Mrs. Mary Wood and Donald Woodworth, who will accompany her Sunday night (Photo by James A. McVie.)

Archdeacon From India To Lecture

Archdeacon John Cable of Chota Nagpur will visit Victoria Monday and Tuesday to address evening meetings at Churist Church Cathedral and All Saints' Church, View Royal.

He will also speak at a meeting of University of Victoria students during the Tuesday lunch hour.

An Australian, Archdeacon Cable received his theological training at Moore College, Sydney, and served a curacy in that area. In 1937 he went to Chota Nagpur, an Anglican diocese with headquarters at Ranchi in the Bihar state of Northeast India, and has been there ever since.

He has worked with a tribe called Kurunkh and knows the language so well he has made a translation of the prayer book and the Old Testament, and helped with a revision of the New Testament.

After two days in Victoria, Archdeacon Cable will visit other Island churches before leaving for Kelowna on Friday.

Evangelist To Conduct City Crusade

Rev. Don Cantelon, 39-year-old evangelist musician and TV personality, will conduct a Victoria crusade in the Glad Tidings and North Douglas tabernacles from this Sunday to Sunday, Nov. 5.

He will also conduct Saturday and Sunday evening services in the McPherson Playhouse.

The crusade is sponsored by four Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada under the local chairmanship of Rev. R. E. Upton and Rev. C. R. Fawcett.

100 NEW CHURCHES

"Target of the campaign is the blitzing of Canada's key population areas and the establishment of 100 new churches—20 in Canada and 80 overseas," Mr. Upton said.

He said co-operative crusades are being held across Canada with Mr. Cantelon as speaker. He will also emcee radio and TV programs in co-operation with Rev. Tom Johnstone, general superintendent of the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada.

"We believe Mr. Cantelon is unusually qualified for the key position of aggressive evangelistic leadership during Canada's Centennial Year," Mr. Upton said.

Uvic Experts Combining On Pollution

Experts from the University of Victoria will act as advisers in a Saanich study of the Colquitz watershed, Reeve Hugh Curtis announced Friday.

A joint statement issued by Reeve Curtis and Esquimalt Reeve Ray Bryant said:

"It is our opinion that this study will represent the first major and all-inclusive effort ever undertaken to categorize the ills of this watershed-waterway area and to come forward with reasonable and effective correcting measures."

The study, approved by Saanich council six months ago and scheduled to start in the fall, will be handled by Frank Neate, a professional engineer engaged in special projects for Saanich.

POLICY ADVICE

"The role to be played by individual members of the faculty of the University of Victoria is extremely important for they will be asked to act in an advisory capacity during the formulation of the policy and advise on the possible consequences of proposed actions," said the reeves.

University experts include two ecologists, an economist, sociologist, political scientist, aquatic biologist, marine biologist, ichthyologist, oceanographer, biogeographer and urban geographer.

The reeves said a general round-table discussion will be held within a few weeks with representatives from the university, fisheries and wild life, elected municipal officials and members of the Saanich planning, recreation and engineering departments.

The study will include the whole watershed from Elk-Beaver Lakes to Portage Inlet and Gorge Waterway.

PRICELESS AREA

When the study is completed, the reeves said, it will be possible to compare advantages of taking certain action against the possible consequences.

"It will then be a matter for discussion to establish a policy to carry out such works where the benefit exceeds possible undesirable consequences," they said.

They called the watershed area "a priceless natural resource" for all who live in and visit southern Vancouver Island.

West Indies Study New Economic Link

BRIDGETOWN (Reuters)—Leaders of 13 English-speaking Caribbean territories are slated to make a determined effort to settle the thorny issue of regional economic integration at a four-day summit conference in this capital of Barbados next week.

No agenda has been announced for the conference, which opens Monday, but it promises to be the most important of its kind since the death of the old West Indies Federation in 1962.

The key issue is bound to be the fresh forging of economic links severed by the breakdown of the federation.

Expected to attend were leaders of Barbados, Jamaica, Trinidad-Tobago, Guyana, Grenada, St. Lucia, Dominica, Antigua and St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla, St. Vincent, Montserrat, the Bahamas and British Honduras.

Kamaluddin Mohammed, Trinidad's minister for West Indian affairs, said the people of the Caribbean cannot hope to survive without regional cooperation.

Arm Restored

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Maurice Thomas' right arm, restored to his body two months ago, has feeling and good blood circulation now. The arm was torn from its socket Aug. 14 while Thomas, 21, was working in a laundry. Doctors worked five hours to sew the arm back on. Doctors expressed optimism Friday that the limb will survive.

REORGANIZATION SET

New Guidelines In Mental Health

The provincial government's plan for reorganizing mental health services in B.C. was outlined Friday in a policy statement by deputy minister Dr. F. G. Tucker.

Dr. Tucker is the author of a report on mental health services which has not yet been made public. Last spring he was appointed deputy minister.

In his policy statement he said it can be assumed that future programs will be based on the following:

- Decentralization and reorganization will be emphasized and a wide range of new programs developed to meet local needs.
- The existing division in the care of physical and mental illness will gradually lessen and largely disappear.
- The larger centralized facilities will be adapted to meet current demands for psychiatric services to the mentally ill and retarded.
- The recruitment and training of new professional staff will receive a high priority due to the anticipated continued shortage of mental health professionals.
- In-service training and retraining will be advanced and special programs developed to meet staffing requirements.
- Increasing emphasis will be placed on prevention, thereby requiring more precise problem identification and definite planning.

In summary, Dr. Tucker said the reorganization will result in a broadening of the mental health branch from that of a service organization to one which will be involved in all aspects of mental health.

Five-Day Filibuster Continuing

ROME (AP)—The longest filibuster in Italy's postwar history dragged through its fifth day today.

At issue in the parliamentary battle between Conservatives and Premier Aldo Moro's centre-left coalition is a controversial bill to set up 14 new regional governments.

Deputies from the small Liberal party, joining ranks with the Monarchists and Fascists, have succeeded so far in pushing the government into a slowdown by demanding secret votes on each of 200 amendments to the bill and by dragging out debate on each of the 26 articles.

The deputies, in session since Tuesday, break for several hours every morning.

The rightists are extending the debate to demonstrate that the government is weak despite its parliamentary majority.

GIVES LEFTIST LEVER

Italy already has five autonomous regions and 14 more would be created in 1969 if the contested bill is approved. The rightists contend this would benefit the Communists.

Amid catcalls, jeers, fistfights and imporing cries of "Let's get down to real business," the deputies so far have approved three of the 26 articles.

The longest previous filibuster was in 1949 when the Chamber of Deputies sat for 51 hours before ratifying Italy's entry into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

To get some rest, the government is using the only procedural escape at its disposal. The entire coalition walks out of the chamber to deprive it of quorum required for a session.

LSD DEFORMS CHILDREN —U.K. MEDICAL JOURNAL

LONDON (Reuters)—LSD, the hallucinogenic drug lysergic acid diethylamide, can cause the birth of deformed children as well as permanent mental damage, says the British Medical Journal in its latest issue, available Friday.

In a report inquiring whether the drug could be as dangerous as thalidomide—the tranquilizer which caused the birth of many limbless children in 1962—the journal says:

"It can be stated with certainty that LSD . . . may also cause chromosomal abnormalities, foetal malformations and possibly leukemia."

In addition to the unpredictable hallucinogenic properties of the drug, which could lead to permanent mental damage, it now appears that it might also have powerful effects on cell production, the report says.

LSD was shown to cause "abortion, stillbirth, congenital malformation and reduced litter size in rats injected with the drug early in pregnancy," it adds.

CROCODILE WAS WIFE

Drugged Man Kills

LEEDS, England (Reuters)—A man who said he acted under the influence of the hallucinogenic drug LSD was sentenced to prison for 12 years by a court Friday for the manslaughter of his wife.

Robert Stocker, 22, had pleaded not guilty.

Before the verdict, he told the court that on the day of his wife's death she gave him a cup of coffee which looked very strong. There was a piece of paper floating in it, he said.

Afterwards he saw his wife lying on her back with what appeared to be a green crocodile with a mauve pink belly lying on top of her, Stocker said.

"It seemed to blend in with my wife as it was crushing itself into her. I tried to kill it with a pickle jar."

Stocker's lawyer submitted his client unwittingly had taken LSD with his coffee.

Lost Temper Found Fine

Wilfred R. Low, 425 Wilson, was fined $50 in central court Friday after pleading guilty ot an assault charge.

He said he lost his temper and beat another youth who called him a name on the White Spot parking lot.

What can you depend on?

How often have you heard someone say, "There's nothing you can really depend on these days"?

So often life itself seems unreliable.

But there is something you can depend on.

There is a God you can trust. Christian Scientists the world over are finding this out. They're proving for themselves that God is "an ever present help in time of trouble."

If you would like to learn about a God you can depend on, hear this lecture by Glenn L. Morning, C.S.B. Bring family and friends . . . the lecture is free.

Serious Problem Of Air Pollution On Sunday Special

"We shouldn't be spending money on how we are going to survive in space. First, we should worry about how we're going to survive on earth."

This statement, made by a young woman during a recent on-the-street interview in a major Canadian city, sums up the opinion of many people—that air pollution is a deadly serious problem.

On Sunday night at 8 Channels 2 and 6 will present Air of Death, a special hour-long program dealing with air pollution—its causes and its effects, its hazards from a medical standpoint, serious problem areas and what is—and is not—being done to control it.

Opinions on the controversial subject will be given by Canadian and U.S. industrialists, politicians, government officials, clerics, union men, medical authorities and ordinary citizens.

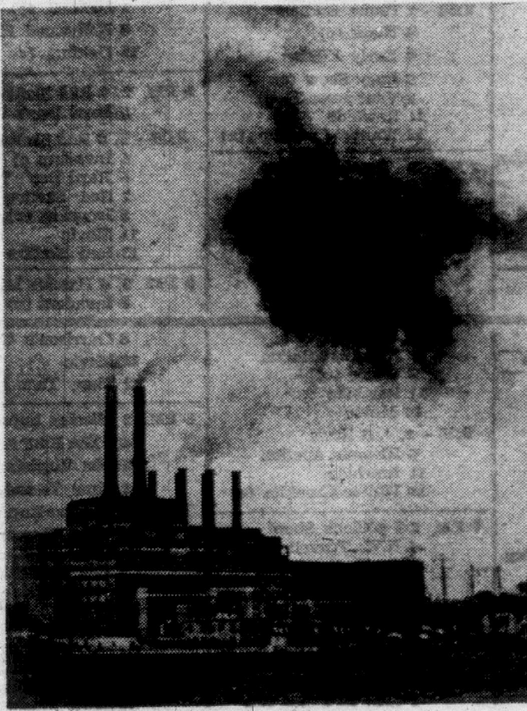
Air of Death was produced by Larry Gosnell of CBC-TV's farm and fisheries department, Toronto, and written by George Salverson. Host, narrator and interviewer is Stanley Burke.

"There's a great deal of contradiction in what the people we interviewed say," says producer Gosnell. "We were shocked at what many had to tell us and more so by what we saw during our travels. It's all in the film."

Filming for the special was done across Canda and parts of the U.S., in places with air pollution problems, including Detroit, Windsor, Sarnia, Port Huron, Dunville, Ont., Hamilton, Toronto, Montreal, Port Alberni, Sydney, N.S., and New York City.

Among those interviewed on the program are Dr. Stephen Ayres, St. Vincent Hospital, New York, a leading specialist in pulmonary diseases, who says: "In dealing with people with serious lung disease . . . it becomes obvious very early in the game, that you can't escape the effects of air pollution;" and Mrs. Hazel Henderson, chairman of the 24,000-member Citizens Committee for Cleaner Air of New York who warns: "Nothing will be done about the pollution problem until the citizens begin to get involved . . ."

Also interviewed is Dr. John J. Hanlon, joint commissioner of health for the city of Detroit and Wayne County, Mich., and Health Minister Allan J. MacEachen.



SMOKE BELCHING out of plants are a continuous source of air pollution in many major North American cities. Subject will be discussed in hour-long special on the CBC-TV network Sunday at 8.

TV TIDBITS

Mark Slade, co-star of NBC-TV's new western series, The High Chaparall, was surprised to see fan mail coming in before the series hit the air. Then he looked closer. The letters were addressed to Mark SLATE (not SLADE), the character played by Noel Harrison on NBC-TV's "The Girl from U.N.C.L.E." last season.

Barbara Feldon, who did TV commercials before starring in NBC-TV's "Get Smart,' ' recalls: "Once I reported for a commercial in which they wanted to use only one of my eyes. All I had to do was close the eye and open it. I worked a half hour and collected $200 a week for the whole year that the commercial was used."

Walt Disney

An Indian girl's prize equine "pupil" seems destined for oblivion until he gets a chance to vindicate both himself and the girl's confidence in him in a rambunctious race at the tribe's annual roundup in "Run, Appaloosa, Run" on Walt Disney's Wonderful World of Color Sunday at 6 on Channel 2.

The story is based on the modern day Nez Perce Indian tribesmen who still raise and sell their famous Appaloosa horses.

Mary Blackfeather (Adele Palacios) recognizes qualities of greatness in a new colt, Sky Dancer, but tribal policy demands she sell him. The horse is mismanaged by two owners and eventually hits bottom as the butt of a rodeo clown's act.

Mary is outraged at this indignity and gets the horse back. She enters him in the wild suicide race at the tribe's annual roundup but disaster seems to have struck when her partner in the relay race is forced out of the pell-mell contest.

Ray Patanude is cast as Mary's brother, Dale; Wilbur Plaugher as the rodeo clown, and Jerry Gatlin as a rodeo rider, Gilly Trask. Rex Allen narrates.

In Person

One of the most exciting entertainers in show business today—that "Old Black Magic" man Billy Daniels—will be the special guest on CBC's In Person at 7:15 over Channels 2 and 6.

Long famed as a star of nightclubs and television, Daniels recently won critical and audience acclaim for his acting-singing role in the Broadway musical, Golden Boy, with Sammy Davis. He is also to co-star in the film version.

The entire edition will be devoted to the Daniels magic, and he will sing Temptation, Nice and Easy, Younger Than Spring, Rainy Day, and, of course, That Old Black Magic.

Accompanying Daniels will be his longtime associate Benny Payne on piano, and the Jimmy Dale Orchestra.

DANIELS

Trick-or-Treat

Witches are flying. Snoopy pursues the Red Baron, Linus awaits the arrival of the Great Pumpkin—but Charlie Brown is grounded with rocks in his trick-or-treat bag—on It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown, an animated cartoon Halloween special in color, Sunday night at 7 on Channels 2 and 6.

While Charlie Brown and the rest of the famous "Peanuts" characters are busy with plans for the annual Halloween party and making their trick-or-treat rounds of the neighborhood, Linus and Sally take up a vigil in the pumpkin patch, awaiting the arrival of the legendary Great Pumpkin, who brings gifts to good little boys and girls.

Charlie winds up with a sack full of rocks and Linus faces another kind of disillusionment as Halloween plays its own tricks on the Peanuts.

Veteran Star Praises Good Jazz

HOLLYWOOD — "Good jazz may be going, but it's not going without a struggle from me," Frank Sinatra said.

"As long as my vocal chords hold out, then I expect to be singing the good songs, the songs with style, beauty and rhythm," he promised.

"That's one reason why I decided to do these television specials in the first place," explained Sinatra, who has starred in a show a year for the past three years. "Good jazz may be on the way out, but it's going to hear from me, first."

Sinatra, one of America's top male vocalists for a quarter of a century, expressed firm convictions both about what to sing and how to sing it.

"I don't want to dazzle viewers with a lot of mumbo jumbo and stuff," he continued, explaining his preference for simplified television staging.

"I figure if they are watching me they are fans. If they are fans, then I know what they like in musical terms and I give it to them.

"I don't try to convince them that I'm the greatest thing since sliced bread. I just sing to them. They like it and I like it."

Sinatra hand picked the song to be featured on his forthcoming NBC-TV special with an eye for variety, explaining that an evening of love ballads could get a little sticky.

"I pace myself: A mood song, like 'Strangers in the Night.' Then, perhaps, an all-out blaster like 'Come Fly With Me.'

"Some singers, unfortunately, just sing lyrics," Sinatra continued. "When I sing a song I mean it from my head to my toes.

"I don't just sing a lot of words strung together. I believe every word I sing. I feel the song and I feel what the composer had in mind when he wrote it.

"I have seen a lot of life and have done a lot of living. When I sing a love song, I know what I am singing about.

"If I'm singing the blues, I know what they're all about because I've been there, too. I try to use my voice like an artist uses his brush . . . he paints a picture you can see, feel and understand."

Although he feels that the era of cool jazz is passing, Sinatra believes that it will be replaced, eventually, by music similar to the swing period of the '30s.

He admits that rock and roll and the unintelligible lyrics of contemporary long-haired guitar thumpers have no place in the Sinatra "bag," but he's quick to point out that "if the kids like it, I think it's fine."

Loren Special Wednesday

Beautiful Star In Singing Role For Initial Time

The villagers of Marino, in the Alban Hills south of Rome, get to hold their October wine festival twice this year. Once for real; once for television. The TV-inspired celebration will provide part of the background for "With Love . . . Sophia," the hour-long color special starring Sophia Loren, for telecast Wednesday night, at 10, over Channels 2 and 4.

The narrow streets of Marino are not far from the Villa Ponti, Miss Loren's sumptuous Roman estate where most of the musical special was filmed.

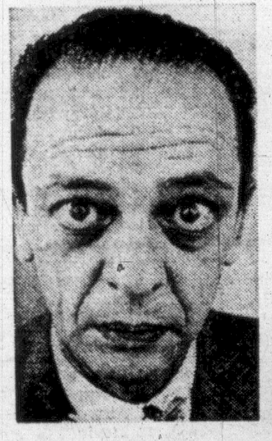
Appearing with the famous Sophia are her Italian leading man Marcello Mastrioanni and Jonathan Winters, with special guest star Peter Sellers. They talk, sing and kibbitz in this musical tour of Sophia's villa and its environs. Miss Loren, in fact, does her first singing performance on the show. And Tony Bennett's voice is heard in several numbers, one of which is a tribute to "that fabulous face. . . ."

Kids Next Door

Soloists and song stylists being the individualists that they are, it seems unlikely that 17 of them could successfully blend into a chorus.

But this is exactly what has happened in the case of the Kids Next Door, who appear as guests on the Don Knotts special Thursday night at 8 over Channels 7, 12.

Singing songs — with appropriate choreography — which range in mood and tempo from the raucous Jubilation T. Cornpone, from the Broadway hit Li'l Abner, to the stirring strains of Born Free or the duicet melody of What the World Needs Now, the Kids have been entertaining audiences across the U.S. in concert and on television for more than two years.



KNOTTS

Most of the nine boys and eight girls who comprise the group are graduates of the Young Americans, who won a Peabody Award for excellence on their first television appearance in 1963.

Aside from their fresh, wholesome appearance and youthful enthusiasm, the unique quality of the Kids Next Door lies in the fact that each performer has a talent all his own which is often displayed during the course of their appearance. Each is able to perform in his own distinctive manner; playing a banjo, guitar, bass or harmonica, singing an area, wailing out a folk tune or performing a dance routine. Each speaks musically for himself, yet, when placed within the group, blends in perfect harmony.

Documentary

How to compress more than 350 years of American history into an hour-long documentary is the problem that confronted producers of A Nation of Immigrants, the TV special Wednesday night at 10 over Channel 7.

Not as difficult as it might sound, actually, inasmuch as the producers were basing the program on a book of the same title by the late President Kennedy.

Helping them along were the "stars" of their program, some of the most famous persons in history, all immigrants to the U.S.

Mel Stuart, executive producer for Wolper Productions, peopled the program with the names and pictures of physicists Albert Einstein and Enrico Fermi, aircraft designer Igor Sikorski, journalist Joseph Pulitzer, composer Victor Herbert and others.

Then he invited several distinguished Americans of foreign birth to describe their experiences in their adopted country. Among these "stars" are author Leo Rosten, conductor Leopold Stokowski, photographer Edward Steichen and Metropolitan Opera basso Salvatore Baccaloni STROLLING in the gardens at Villa Ponti are Sophia Loren and her Italian leading man, Marcello Mastroianni. Gardens are part of the glamorous star's estate in Rome. She will be featured in hour-long color special Wednesday night at 10 on Channels 2 and 4.

The program describes the hardships that confronted each new wave of immigrants, from the Pilgrims who sailed aboard the Mayflower to those arriving today in jet planes. And it points out that each generation coming to the U.S. has faced the prejudice and snobbery of those who preceded them.

School Series

A series of programs showing how life of people in six regions of Canada has been influenced by the geographical environment and impressions of what life in each region is like, will be presented on Canadian School Telecasts each Thursday morning beginning Oct. 26, at 10 on Channels 2, 6.

The seven, half-hour programs are produced by Doug Davidson of CBC-TV's schools and youth department. The programs will treat the regions of the Arctic, the sub-Arctic northland, the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence lowlands, the Prairies, the western mountian area, and the Atlantic region.

The first program deals with the idea of geography, its principles, concepts and problems.

"The series is designed to give viewing students a new perspective on their own environment and way of life," says producer Davidson. "It shows them that geography is not just "something in a not just 'something in a factors around us in the real world, affecting all our lives."

Law on Wheels

Marvin Liddell, half Chickasaw Indian, was a U.S. Golden Gloves boxing champion in the late thirties. He now does his fighting in a ring of legal technicalities or in the courtoom or often working from his law office on wheels, the first of its kind in the country.

Liddell is the staff lawyer for Delaware County in Oklahoma and part of a community action program to provide legal assistance to low-income residents. He will be seen at work with his clients in Justice for All a one-hour color special to be presented Friday night at 10 on Channel 5.

Forty per cent of the population in this rural area is Cherokee Indian and nearly 70 per cent earn less than $3,000 per year per family. The program will bring out the fact that before the introduction of the legal services program, which receives its funds from the office of economic opportunity, the poor had never had the services of an attorney.

The "lawmobile" was placed in service to enable Liddell and other lawyers to reach people in remote areas. This law office on wheels is equipped with a typewriter and Mrs. Ruth Duncan, a Cherokee who acts as driver and legal secretary and, most important, as interpreter. Liddell and Mrs. Duncan will be shown making their rounds on the program.

An 18-year-old sailor was fined $70 and ordered to make restitution of $15 after pleading guilty to two charges of wilful damage in central court, Friday.

James Russ of the Port Quebec, admitted that he and a companion were in an apartment building looking for an acquaintance and on the way out he pulled down a set of drapes bending the rod which cost $5 to repair.

In the parking lot he pulled off a car radio aerial which cost $10 to replace.

No House Hopeless ... Even 40-Year-Old

By PAULINE GRAVES

This exciting, dramatic living room, thoroughly of today, is in a 40-year-old bungalow. Designed by decorator Adele Faulkner, the room gives no hint of its former, very ordinary appearance, for the change is complete. And it proves that no house is hopeless.

To make the small room seem larger, sliding doors replaced a solid wall. Consequently the small windows on each side of the fireplace became unnecessary. These windows and the fireplace gave the room its look of age, so the most drastic alteration come with blocking them out.

A new wall was built out, 12 inches in front of the old wall, to be even with the fireplace front, but with a recess in front of the former window. This displays a tall primitive African carving, but a plant or any tall sculpture would do as well. Instead of overhead lighting in the recess, light panels extend down each side. These use the depth between the old wall and the new, and consist of flourescent tubes behind translucent glass.

Also using space between the old and new walls are bookshelves. Note that the size of the shelves line up exactly with the recess, even to the base which is 18 inches from the floor. The dramatic painting is very much a part of the scheme, too, its top also level with the recess.

With all of the architectural interest at the side of the fireplace there was no need for a mantel, and the fireplace design was kept simple, the hearth and the opening outlined with decorative ceramic tiles.

TIPS FOR HOME GARDENERS

Plastic or Glass Greenhouses?

By JACK BEASTALL

Jack

Everywhere we turn, plastic in one form or another is encountered. The wonder product of the century provides fibres for weaving, rigid sheets of transparent waterproof material, photographic film, and thousands of moulded products from toys to household appliances.

Little wonder that horticulture saw a number of promising applications for this versatile material, but it took many years to understand its properties and limitations.

The home gardener's interest is mainly in plastic film, for we can make structures for plant protection on the lightest of framework, with the simplest construction, and at an extremely low cost.

●

These facts have caused many home gardeners to consider building a greenhouse-type structure covered with plastic film, a feasible idea since commercial growers have covered many acres of soil with plastic houses.

In most instances the idea has stemmed from the desire to have a greenhouse in which to grow plants over winter without any great expense or the need for special construction skill.

As far as cost is concerned and ease of construction, the plastic, or polythene, covered house has all in its favor, but maintenance and operating costs are considerably higher than for a glass-house, because polythene has properties quite different to those of glass.

●

A glass-house, or greenhouse, also a cold frame, are structures designed to trap and hold heat, regardless of whether that heat comes from the sun or a supplemental heat source within the structure.

There are two kinds of heat waves, long and short waves. Heat leaves the sun as short waves which penetrate the earth's atmosphere until they strike a solid object (building, a person, a plant, or the soil,) and give up their heat.

The object absorbs the heat until its temperature becomes greater than that of the surrounding air, then it starts radiating heat in the form of long heat waves which in turn raise the temperature.

Glass permits almost uninterrupted passage to short heat waves which raise the temperature of the pots, benches, walks and woodwork within the structure, but it offers considerable resistance to the passage of the reflected long heat waves from these objects.

The result is trapped heat that can only escape through cracks.

●

Polythene offers free passage to both short heat waves from the sun and long heat waves reflected from heated objects which means that the heat passes out through the plastic film as easily as it enters.

To grow plants successfully through the winter the plastic house requires an automatic constant-temperature source of heat such as electricity or oil burner, whereas a glass-house can be kept frost free with a second-hand kerosene heater or a small coal stove.

The cost of automatic electric heat installed according to the electrical code and connected to an approved service already on the property is around $300 for the average structure permitted on home grounds.

●

In a glass-house there is a certain amount of leakage where each sheet of glass laps over its neighbor so that warm air escapes and fresh cool air enters. This maintains a mild circulation of the air inside the structure and a more even temperature throughout.

A plastic house is completely sheathed in the film, therefore leak-free, so that the air remains stationary in layers, the hot on top and the cold below.

To circulate the air and produce a more even tem produce from roof to bench level requires the installation of a machine called a "turbulator" or mixer. It resembles an electric fan but it is designed to move air without causing a draft, which is fatal to plants.

●

All plant growing structures require a high relative humidity which causes severe condensation on glass or polythene when the outside air is cooler than inside.

The leakage already referred to in a glass-house permits some of the dampness to escape, and open ventilators during the day prevent an excessive build-up of unwanted moisture.

Water vapor cannot pass through plastic film although air passes freely. So we have considerably more moisture running down the surface of the film and adding moisture to the soil in the house.

Excessive moisture results in severe fungous troubles and to prevent these requires automatic venting fans in the walls to expel the air when it becomes too moist for the well being of the plants.

●

Expelled air has to be replaced with fresh air drawn in through automatic louvres, and the fresh air has to be rapidly brought to inside temperature by the heating units.

Maintainance work on a glass-house consists of annual painting, and the replacement of two or three cracked glasses a year.

●

Maintenance on a polythene house (five-mil plastic) consists of complete replacement of the film every 10 to 11 months in our climate.

Mylar greenhouse covering will last around seven years, but it is more expensive than glass and must be stretched by mechanical means when applied.

●

After 15 years experience with both glass and polythene houses, it is safe to say that plastic film will not take the place of glass for permanent plant growing structures, especially those used by amateur gardeners who are unable to spend their full time attending to the needs of their plants.

THE WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

Dig the roots of canna which flowered so well this hot dry summer. Store the roots in dry soil or sand in a cool place just free of frost.

Pot up dwarf bulbous iris, ixia, sparaxis and dwarf early tulips — preferably some of the fragrant varieties. Bury the pots under sand in a coldframe for rooting.

If large geraniums are to be kept for next year, be sure you have a cool, light place to keep them. The roots can be put into large pots for ease of handling. Cut back partially and give a little water about once a month.

Late potatoes can be dug as foliage withers. Choose a dry day, so that skins can dry off rapidly.

Jerusalem artichokes can be lifted as needed. The stems of those remaining can be cut down to prevent wind loosening.

Be sure Brussels sprouts and other cabbages are firm in the ground.

Cut back dahlia plants and lift tubers for storage.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

By JACK BEASTALL

Q. When are ixia bulbs planted? And can the Prairie Crocus be grown here? — T.K., Cobble Hill.

A. Ixia bulbs (or corms) are only winter hardy in sandy soils near salt water, but they can be put into large pots now and kept in a coldframe free from frost over winter. They will bloom in May outdoors when frost is past.

The Prairie Crocus is now botanically Pulsatilla vulgaris. It is grown easily here, also the white and wine-colored varieties.

Q. Is it too late to use weed killers on the lawn? — K.L., Oak Bay.

A. Yes, since weed killers are growth activators, the weeds must be in active growth. Wait for early spring before using on the lawn.

Q. Should a lawn receive fertilizer in fall. — J.F.B., Saanich.

A. It is standard practice here to apply a complete lawn fertilizer around the beginning of September as the grass starts its fall period of growth. This strengthens the plants for the more adverse winter conditions.

THE TWO FACES OF ELECTRIC HEAT

They tell you:

- Electric heat offers just the kind of heat you want, where you want it.
- Next time someone promises lowest heating costs, ask him to put it in writing.
- Electric water heaters are as efficient as oil-fired water heaters.

We tell you:

- Any qualified heating contractor will verify that electricity adds hot air but doesn't remove stale air. That's why electric heated homes are often so stuffy.
- Any oil heat dealer would be pleased to give you a written estimate of the operating costs of an oil heat system. Electric heat costs up to 100% more than oil heat.
- It is a proven fact that oil heats water six times faster than electricity, and much more economically.

POWINDAH'S MASTER MISCALCULATES

The Near-Terror of a Major Error

By JOHN MANNING

Former Victoria Times reporter John Manning and his wife, Pat, are currently on a 12,000-mile "Centennial Cruise" aboard their tiny sailing ship Powindah. The pair started in England and hope to end their cruise in the Inner Harbor. This is the 46th in a series on their adventures.

Herman Melville called them "the ash heaps of the Pacific."

Other sailors labelled them the 'bewitched' islands for they had the somewhat ghostly habit of disappearing, setting compasses cockeyed and putting unwary ships aground by means of strong currents and shifting mists.

The Galapagos Islands have not lost these properties. They almost destroyed Powindah.

Indeed they came closer to wrecking her than any landfall since the beginning of her voyage.

To be truthful, the basic cause lay to faulty navigation on the part of her master; for in the five day passage out from Manta, Ecuador I had been making a continuous error in working sun sights.

At the end of the five days this error had culminated in our being 50 miles farther North than I anticipated. The devil himself could not have devised a more perfect shipwreck situation.

Sextant Out

At night, among the lighthouse-free Northern islands of the Galapagos group, a fifty-mile error in navigation can mean the death of a ship. To make matters worse, on the last day the weather took a turn for the worse, the sky clouded over and thus prohibited further use of the sextant.

When sundown arrived all light disappeared from the sky as suddenly as if we had sailed into the mouth of a cave. By then the wind was blowing half a gale with the sea making up higher than we had seen since leaving the Panama Canal. The shrouds were giving off an eerie whine, as though a witch was using them for fiddle strings.

The air had become refrigerated by the Humbolt Current causing the crew to bundle up in heavy weather gear while the ship's parrot had a hot water bottle placed on either side of his cage. It made one think of Cape Horn where the current originated.

Reefed Down

At 3 a.m. we reefed down, lessening the area of the main sail, which slowed our passage through the water and made the motion of the boat less violent.

For some reason I felt a certain disquiet, a premonition of imminent disaster.

During Pat's watch I could not sleep and instead reworked every celestial observation taken since leaving Ecuador. Still no error revealed itself. Finally I went back into the cockpit where the Mate sat keeping watch for ships and whatever else the night might hold.

"Can't you sleep?" she asked.

"No. I'll keep you company awhile."

"Is something the matter?"

"No. Just can't sleep."

I have always believed in trying to emulate my boyhood hero, Captain Horatio Hornblower, when it comes to moments of peril at sea.

A 'commanding officer' should never broadcast his worries. To the inmates of his vessel he should remain as calm as a cigar store Indian—even if the crew are but his wife and a green parrot.

'Look Worried'

"Are you concerned about your navigation?" inquired the Mate in her gentle voice. "You look worried."

So much for Hornblower. "No, I think we are pretty well bang on. Daybreak will give us the proper clue. Should sight San Cristobal Island. It's a high one.

"Well that's fine then. You can turn in now. Your coffee's finished."

"Thanks, but I'll wait awhile."

"Then you are worried. Are we near rocks?"

"No!"

"Now you're becoming irritable. Ever since I've come on watch you've been fussing over the chart, making coffee and poking around like an old Billy goat. It's obvious you're worried about our position. Why don't we heave to?"

"We're supposedly miles from the nearest land and I hate to waste this good wind. If only there wasn't this current to contend with I'd know whether my navigation was off base."

'Stop Sailing'

"Well I think we should stop sailing for the rest of the night. I've never seen you in such a state," she said.

"Put the helm over then and we'll back the staysail."

This meant that the wind would catch the sail from the opposite of its normal direction leaving the boat to bob up and down in the breaking seas.

Compared to normal sailing where the ship is canted over and perhaps slamming into heavy seas, the motion incurred by heaving to is similar to that of a slow moving elevator—except that you are unable to get out at the next floor.

Dawn came like a single cat's eye into the cave of night, enlarging itself upon the Eastern horizons. The unknown turned into the reality of sea and sky and the small world that is Powindah.

"I see land!" exclaimed the Mate. "An island dead off the bow," said the Mate.

Wrong Island

Perhaps three miles distant. The wrong island. It was the peak of a long extinct volcano—Tower Island—an uninhabited landfall more than 50 miles North of our estimated position. If we had come upon it in the night? If we had met it in the long carrying rush of one breaker the boat and her crew would have been demolished as surely as if hit with a bomb.

The wind of the previous night had eased considerably although locomotive-sized breakers were thundering into the only anchorage, a deep bay named after Charles Darwin, that was actually part of the island volcano crater. Reluctantly we sailed by and stood on for the next island while I again recalculated my sights.

It took a full hour to discover that I had been subtracting, instead of adding one variant throughout the entire series. Through such an error our fate had almost been decided.

Small County

New York County, better known as Manhattan Island, is the smallest county in the continental United States. Its land area totals only 22.6 square miles, but it has a population of 1,750,000 persons. The four other counties, which with Manhattan make up New York City, are: Bronx County, Kings County (Brooklyn), Queens County and Richmond County (Staten Island).

THE SAND PEBBLES
Victoria Premiere
Odeon Theatre

It has been said that Hollywood films do not attack the American establishment.

This is patently untrue since The Sand Pebbles (20th Century-Fox) is an obvious criticism of U.S. policy in Vietnam, while the crewmen of the U.S. gunboat, San Pablo, seem to represent the U.S. public — complacent, orthodox, concerned but anxious not to rock the boat.

Producer-director Robert Wise (The Sound of Music) has turned the clock back 41 years to create this strange parallel with affairs in Vietnam.

The gunboat, San Pablo, is ordered to parade the Stars and Stripes up and down the Chinese Yangzse River and shoot, if necessary, to protect American lives and interests during the political uprisings of 1926.

★ ★ ★

The captain (Richard Crenna) behaves like a 19th-century military autocrat, while the hero (Steve McQueen) seems to represent all the fine young men who give their lives in successive wars.

But McQueen is more than a heroic martyr. He is a highly efficient ship's engineer and a lone wolf who goes his own way and satisfies his own standards independently of officialdom.

The San Pueblo is obviously not going his way. It is an instrument of imperialism in which the U.S. crewmen live like mandarins while the coolies do most of the work.

When Steve McQueen insists on doing his own work, the tradition-bound captain and crew — and even some of the coolies — turn against him.

Furthermore, McQueen is too much of a philosopher to go along with aggressive militarism on the Yangtze.

"All these people want is to be left alone," he tells the crew. "How would you like it if the Chinese sent a gunboat up the Mississippi?"

McQueen is in his element as the rebel engineer, but Richard Attenborough, as one of the few American seamen he gets along with, seems a little out of place.

The story is backed by spectacular battle scenes, a hard-slugging fist fight and splendid Taiwan seascapes. Friday night's audience at the Odeon seemed well pleased with the overall result.

Room Number May Indicate The Service

TOKYO — Service-conscious Canadians visiting Japan for the first time should keep an eye open for Japanese superstitions — particularly if they stay in second or third-class hotels.

Many superstitious Japanese have a number phobia, like their Canadian counterparts who carefully sidestep the number 13.

Among Japanese, the numbers four and nine (which, incidentally, total 13) portend bad luck; four stands for death; nine means hard times or bitter experiences, such as physical suffering or bankruptcy.

The unsuspecting Canadian, visiting Tokyo for the first time, may find himself booked into room number nine on the fourth floor, and then wonder why service is so perfunctory. Answer: superstitious house-staff is giving the bad-luck room a wide berth.

IGNORE SUPERSTITION

Of course, a first-class Tokyo hotel, such as the New Otani, Okura, Imperial or Palace, is carefully staffed without concession to superstition.

The 17-storey Hotel New Otani in Tokyo, for example, Japan's largest and most modern hostelry, typifies the modern attitude. According to Kichisaburo Okada, general manager, "A major modern hotel must give superstition short shrift if it hopes to serve its guests graciously.

"Consequently, service on our fourth and ninth floors — and in rooms four and nine on each floor — is up to the high standards prevailing throughout the hotel."

Similarly, the 10-acre garden in which the hotel is situated, and its many restaurants — including a revolving lounge that gives a panoramic view of all Tokyo once every hour — may have benches or tables seating four persons.

Date Capital of South Appears Like Green Cloud

Palm Springs with its 4,000 swimming pools and famous golfers Bob Hope and General Eisenhower is rather an amazing place. But so is the county that the oasis is laid in.

Riverside County starts at the Colorado River and stretches almost all the way across California in a changing panorama of desert, high mountains and orange groves, to within nine miles of the Pacific Ocean.

●

Palm Springs enjoys the warm winter sun behind the great windbreak of two-mile high Mt. San Jacinto. Within the city limits of the oasis, you board an aerial tramway car and in 15 minutes you're whisked over a mile up the mountain to the pines, snows and a view that reaches all the way into Arizona.

The Coachella Valley stretching out from the oasis is an interesting reach of desert. It is called the "Arabia of America" and with good reason, the area's All-Year Club points out. It raises better dates than Arabia and even has a town called Mecca.

On the road from Palm Springs to Indio, the "Date Capital," you see a soft green cloud against the desert horizon. Closer, the green cloud becomes the even tops of thousands of palm trees laid out in precise rows. From about the time that the winter season is quickening in Palm Springs in October, until Christmas, the date harvest is underway. You can eat fresh dates, date cookies, date cake, date candy, date malts.

●

The Coachella Valley and its date palm gardens slide slowly down below sea level. Indio is a minus 66 feet, Mecca is as deep down as a 15-storey building.

At the bottom of the pit is the blue of orphaned Salton Sea sparkling against the desert yellow, 235 feet below sea level. This is a warm water swimming, boating and water skiing paradise. All winter long they catch the big and sporty corbina.

Behind Palm Springs, the high mountains cut off the desert from the greener part of Riverside County. Mt. San Jacinto juts up 10,786 feet in one of the steepest escarpments in the United States, a rise of nearly two miles from oasis to snowy peak in a horizontal distance of only about eight miles.

One of the routes through the mountain mass is San Gorgonio Pass between Mt. San Jacinto and its even higher brother, Mt. San Gorgonio, 11,485 feet. The Southern Pacific Railroad tracks and the freeway to Los Angeles make the easy climb through this hugh trough at 2,585 feet.

Another is the spectacular and aptly named Pines-to-Palms Highway. A few minutes from the warm desert and Palm Springs, this road climbs the wiggles of Seven Level Hill and circles around a shoulder of the mountain a little less than a mile high. Idyllwild is a rustic mountain resort beneath the pines.

●

Down the other side of the mountain is historic Indian country. It was here that Helen Hunt Jackson got the idea for her novel "Ramona." The story goes that she read a court record of a white man who killed an Indian but was let free because no one showed up to prosecute. Every spring some 300 citizens of the towns of Hemet and San Jacinto dramatize the story in the Ramona Outdoor Play staged in a natural mountainside amphitheatre.

●

Just beyond is the county seat of Riverside and its famous Mission Inn which has been designated a California State Historical Site. Riverside was the birthplace of California's mammoth orange industry. The original Navel tree is still growing fruit in a special little park of its own. Some 9,000,000 trees have come from this old tree since it was brought from Brazil in 1873.

Orange groves spread over much of this section of the county. Also, lemon groves, bearing blossoms and ripe fruit every month of the year. The lemon tree is a hard worker. In a single year a good Riverside County lemon tree may bear 3,000 lemons.

Champagne Corks Pop Into the Sea!

By TERRY COLEMAN
The Manchester Guardian

Admiral Rodney, who got around a bit, said Barbados was the most beautiful island in the world. That was in 1780. The island was first settled by the British in 1625, and the Barbadians still call it Little England.

Well, they play cricket and bingo and they have a Trafalgar Square from which Nelson's statue faces a joint where they sell fish and chips, said to be wrapped in genuine English newspapers.

But George Washington slept there in 1751 and liked it, and these days thousands of Americans go there for the white beaches, for the sailing, and for the sun which bathes you all day until it sets suddenly with an astonishing green flash.

MOST FROM U.S.

In a recent survey it was found that almost 90 per cent of visitors to the Caribbean came from the United States, 5.3 per cent from Canada, and only 3.5 per cent from Europe.

This is a holiday for sun-worshippers. Barbados is only 13 degrees north of the equator. Rodney, and Nelson after him, came at a leisurely rate of knots and sailed warmer every day. Nowadays, coming from a northern winter and stepping off a jet into the heat, even returning Barbadians need time to acclimatize. If the hotel people are kind they tell you to take things easy for a couple of days, take sunburn pills, and wear a hat. Relax, learn to walk slowly: Only mad dogs and Americans run round in the midday sun.

The temperature hovers around 80, but the heat is softened by the trade winds. In the high season, from December to April, there is always a breeze from the east. The tourist board is trying to encourage year round traffic and hotel rates do reduce sharply from April 15 to Dec. 15. So May and November are worth trying, but few people would recommend June, July or August.

After sugar cane, tourism is the second industry. Night clubs have names like Cloud Nine and Beau Brummell: at Pelican Village you can buy Barbadian handicrafts; and everywhere you can eat with an American lavishness. I saw at least six restaurants which could claim, as one hotel does, that you can dine so near the beach that your champagne corks pop into the sea.

This winter forget your fireside.
P&O will show you a world you'll never forget.

Precisely at 5 p.m., January 24, P&O's "Westward Ho!" Round World Adventure commences. It's all yours for as little as $22 a day. Dozens of cities whose names alone say adventure. Shore excursions galore. Your choice of two European land tours. The relaxed amenities of life aboard a British liner. And enough dreams come true to last a lifetime. Isn't this your winter to warm up to the world?

Our liner Iberia will be waiting for you at Vancouver. Waiting to take you to the South Pacific. To Hawaii, Fiji, New Zealand and around Australia to Singapore.

Waiting to take you to Ceylon and Durban, past the magnificent Cape of Good Hope to Capetown, Dakar and Lisbon.

There, you'll have a choice of two escorted tours of Europe. Both start in Portugal and offer you two weeks of special sightseeing. Both are included in the price.

Whatever your tour, Iberia will be waiting for you at the pier in Southampton to take you home again. Across the Atlantic to Bermuda, Florida and the Bahamas. Through the Panama Canal to Acapulco. And up the West Coast.

Iberia. She's a 30,000-ton sea-going resort. With all the things you like about your own home town. A movie theater. A library. Swimming pool. Cozy cafés. Shops. An excellent restaurant. And friendly parties with neighbors from around the world.

The price begins at $2252 tourist class, $2761 first. And that includes everything for 102 days, even escorts.

Over three months of exploring the world and an exciting new life at sea are waiting for you.

But you have to make the first move. Your travel agent will arrange everything for you. Or to your mailbox with the coupon below.

Arthur Mayse

Today or any day, you may observe this tableau at one or other of our Victoria service stations.

A shiny new Williwaw Eight is suckling at one side of the gas-pump island. On the other, a Widget Six has finished taking on fuel. Its windshield is clean, its oil, radiator and battery have been checked, and you in your car astern wait for the lady driver to roll on her way. So does the new pump jockey whom the operator was forced to add to his payroll last month.

The lady, however, has produced a wad of tickets or slips from the glove compartment, and is checking them against another token of the same sort.

Her tally concluded, she says petulantly to the attendant, "I just don't believe there are any winners!" Then, at last, she shoves off.

If you haven't already departed in your hardtop Huff for another station — where the scene may be repeated — you are now free to take on fuel, while grumbling over time wasted by a nuisancy gimmick.

This is the money "giveaway," a game of chance that rewards a few gas purchasers with sums that range from one dollar up to a small fortune. And it may surprise you to learn that many if not most of the service station operators stuck with it are growling about it too.

★

One dealer I talked to hauled out a carton half full of little envelopes, each containing a ticket with a number combination.

"Everyone thinks we're suppled with these by the oil companies," he told me. "But it doesn't work that way. We're required to buy them."

Like the vast majority of dealers, this man leases his station from the oil company whose products he sells. In consequence — and whether rightly or wrongly — he feels that he is compelled to go along with its promotions. There is also the necessity of keeping up with his competition.

So he signs for give-away tickets at a cost to him of from two to five cents apiece. The carton he showed me had cost him $20; it is his fifth, and he does not propose to order more unless or until a new money draw is launched.

Ostensibly, the oil company pays off the winners. The dealer's view, however, is that he finances the prizes and in fact the entire campaign by his purchase of tickets from the company.

Its effect, I learned, has been to produce a class of "floater" customers. These follow the current campaign through its run, then switch to the new gamble with which the rival dealer down the road has just been saddled.

★

"Sure," said another I talked to, "while a giveaway campaign lasts, we sell more gas. But our profit from it never balances the cost of the extra help we're required to hire. It doesn't bring us more shopwork, either. The oil companies may gain from it, but we don't. One way or another, we lose."

One of his competitors agreed that the giveaways leave the dealer's pocket lighter rather than heavier, and also cost him goodwill.

"People don't like not to win, and only a tiny fraction of our customers are going to. A lot of gas buyers get irritated when they fail to hit a lucky combination. Women are specially given to complaining."

All were convinced that the woman driver provides the worst giveaway headache.

Comments: "A man may not ask for a ticket but a woman always will" . . . "Women are rotten losers. If they don't hit a winner, they often get nasty."

I don't like the money giveaways myself (partly because they never won me a nickel) and am inclined to agree with the dealer who calls them "a cancer on what used to be a good, straight business."

This I expect they will remain until, with their customers backing them, our service station operators unite in a loud firm "No!" against further lotteries based on gasoline purchase.

Nobody Gripes About Grapes . . .

Rain in Spain is great for grapes, say Lansdowne Junior Secondary students Deborah Moody and Maggie Garcia, right. Maggie came from Spain, added authenticity to students' foreign food tasting festival at Folk Art Fiesta at McPherson Playhouse Friday. Several schools participated in serving theatre patrons at intermission. They wore costumes of the various countries. See story on Page 7.

Passersby Spot Smoke; Awake Pair

Two youths, returning home from a dance early this morning, noticed smoke coming from the living room at 718 Kings, turned in the fire alarm and aroused two sleeping boys.

Gary Wakeham, 15, of 1137 Bewdley, and his friend, Frank Chidley, 18, of Duncan, used the alarm box at Douglas and Bay. They then awoke Benny Jack, 16, of 718 Kings, and his friend, Charles Webster, 15, of 2528 Rose, who was staying at the house.

A fire department official said the smoke was coming from a smouldering chesterfield cushion and that it could have become a serious fire but for the action of the passing boys.

And Kernels Win Salutes . . .

Indian corn was native food of Canada chosen for display by Mount View dark-eyed beauty Gail Townsend. Most theatre lobbies have pop corn but Gail's offering was novel, brought comment, "Some dish".

UNITED FISHERMEN

Union Re-Applies For Affiliation

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Labor Reporter

The United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union has re-applied to the Canadian Labour Congress for affiliation.

The move was made this week and confirmed Friday by union president Steve Stavenes of Vancouver.

The 8,000-member Canadian union applied 10 years ago to join the CLC but the national labor congress did not act on the bid.

Mr. Stavenes said this was the reason for the re-application.

"Maybe a fresh approach will bring it more to the attention of the CLC, rather than waiting for them acting on a 10-year-old application," he said.

NEVER AN AFFILIATE

The UFAWU, formed in 1945 from a merger of two earlier unions, was never a CLC affiliate.

It was affiliated with the old Trades and Labour Congress of Canada but was expelled in 1954 because of alleged Communist leadership.

Commenting on the re-application, regional CLC vice-president E. T. Staley of Victoria said he personally welcomes any move by unaffiliated unions to join "so long as they are willing to abide by the constitution and policies of the congress.

"If they are willing to make themselves acceptable the CLC will take them in."

One section of the CLC constitution states that any organization "controlled or dominated by Communists, Fascists or other totalitarians or whose policies and activities are consistently directed toward the achievement of the program or purpose of the Communist party, any Fascist organization or other totalitarian movement shall not be permitted as affiliates of this congress."

'OPINION OF SOME'

Asked if the UFAWU is considered Communist-dominated, Mr. Staley said that is "the opinion of some in the CLC. This applies to more than the fishermen's union."

But Meat Balls, Yummy!

Watch the fingers! Joy Hewett, also of Mount View, polishes off Polish meat balls, just to make sure they're scrumptious enough for the theatregoers. Her expression shows they pass the test.

RAIN-SLICKED STREETS BLAMED

Eight Injured in Mishaps

Eight persons were taken to hospital Friday following accidents on rain-slicked city and district streets.

City police have investigated 17 accidents since noon Friday and Saanich police handled 13 accidents between 4 p.m. Friday and midnight.

Taken to hospital, treated and discharged were:

Joseph Scuby, 4545 Duart, and Eva McDonagh, 532 Dallas Road, in a collision on the University of Victoria campus at 5 p.m.

Mrs. Percival Rogers, 3213 Kingsley, in a crash at Caledonia and Blanshard about 8 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. David Waters and their daughter, of 1693 Warren Gardens, in a rear-end collision at Bay and Rose shortly after 9:30 p.m.

Jolan Csizmarm, 1304 Rudlin, in a crash at Johnson and Store Streets about 7:30 p.m.

Mark Walezak, 341 Dupplin, in a collision at the corner of Bay and Quadra just after noon.

Grinding Crash Killed Father As Son Watched

By DON DINGWALL

A 35-year-old Duncan man crashed to his death in a car Friday night while his 10-year-old son watched from a car behind.

Dead is William Louis Hille, of Telegraph Road, Cobble Hill.

Mr. Hille was on his way home from work when his car was in collision with a pickup truck coming in the opposite direction.

There was a grinding head-on collision at the Allenby Road intersection with the Trans Canada Highway, less than a mile south of Duncan.

Driver of the truck was John Grocott, 50, of Chesterfield Street, Duncan. He is in satisfactory condition today in hospital.

Municipal firemen led by Chief Pat Clackson worked frantically to free Hille's body from the wreckage.

His feet were pinned under the car's pedals.

A family friend had driven his son, Billy, in to meet his father at his Jubilee Street barber shop. Billy stayed in the friend's car for the return trip and they were only a few car lengths behind when the accident happened.

Mr. Hille came to Duncan two years ago from Ocean Falls.

A close friend, Bill Metz, said, "He was a quiet man who, except for bowling two nights a week, lived for his family."

Mr. Hille is survived by the widow, Olive, son Billy and two daughters, Cindy and Diane.

Law Clerk Seeks Seat In Oak Bay

Ian Horne, QC, deputy law clerk to the B.C. Legislature and a lifelong resident of Oak Bay, will run for election to Oak Bay council Dec. 9.

Mr. Horne and Jack Rhodes, a resident of Oak Bay since 1964, have declared for the incomplete terms of Couns. Fred Hawes and Douglas Watts, who are resigning to run for the reeveship.

The three incumbents—Couns. Frances Elford, Walter Dodsworth and W. J. J. Wade—have indicated they will stand for office again.

Reeve Allan Cox will retire at the end of the year.

PARENTS LEAN ON CHILDREN

'Alarming' Evidence Found In Psychologist's Survey

Children doing the best they can in school almost all feel they should be doing better.

Close to 200 adults turned up at a seminar dealing with pressures on children this morning to hear a panel of specialists probe the influences bombarding children at home, in school and from the community.

Child psychologist Andrew Mikita told them the preliminary results from a survey of 300 children in kindergarten, grades 1 and 2 showed this "alarming" evidence.

- 97 per cent of the youngsters felt they were doing as well as they could in school.
- 94 per cent felt they should be doing better — but they didn't know why.
- 90 per cent of the children said their parents expected more of them.

"It seems that parents, with their pressures, need children so they can work out their own problems."

When children behave, parents can then "feel good," said Mr. Mikita. In this way parents can sometimes become dependent on their children.

People that are pressuring children are usually not aware they are doing so and can usually produce reasons when it's pointed out to them.

The day-long workshop is being presented by the Island branch of the Association for Childhood Education in cooperation with the Institute for Adult Studies.

Other panel members are Dr. Robert Harper, director and head of the Behavioral Sciences Foundation at Simon Fraser University; Dr. Richard Martin of the University of Victoria's philosophy department and Ray Wunderlich, teacher and former president of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

HE WANTED STAY IN JAIL

A man who flagged down a passing police car and asked to be put in jail got his wish this morning. He was sentenced to one month for vagrancy.

Stanley Lien, of no fixed address, said in court he would get help for his drinking problem if sent to Wilkinson Road.

PORTABLE, CHEAP TO BUY . . . . . . BUT COSTS STILL HIGH

Kidney Cleaning Machine for Home Studied by BCHIS

By PETE LOUDON

A plan to extend artificial kidney treatment to patients in their homes is under study by the provincial health department.

The scheme, utilizing cheap, portable units, could greatly ease an anticipated demand for units now in service at Royal Jubilee Hospital here and at Vancouver.

But B.C. Hospital Insurance Service consultant Dr. Charles Ballam warns various obstacles remain to be overcome.

So far, although new portable equipment shows a great deal of promise, no small machine has obtained the stamp of safety in Canada. And costs are still high.

Home "dialysis" is possible now and is being undertaken in Montreal and Seattle with the same equipment used at present in hospitals, but not on a general basis.

In these areas, patients who a few years ago would have died are leading almost normal lives, attending work and school, despite loss of kidney function.

On regular occasions these patients connect tubes protruding from their circulatory systems with tubes in a machine which filters and launders the blood.

One Seattle girl does her homework while the cleansing process continues.

"It's being studied and at the request of the provincial government the B.C. Medical Association set up an advisory committee. It is exploring the medical feasibility," said Dr. Ballam.

His comments followed a speech by Dr. Peter Banks of Victoria, who outlined the anticipated problem of doctors in deciding who shall have the use of existing hospital units, and who shall not, as demand increases.

In this province 35 to 50 new patients will require dialysis this year. Patients will require continued use of the machines. A five-year case load would require facilities for up to 200 patients.

At present, the facilities here are treating nine. Both Victoria and Vancouver hospitals hope to constantly add to their hospital kidney treatment plants and Trail and Kamloops are providing new units, but a dramatic increase in cases is anticipated.

Costs of hospital units and their operations have proved staggering in some areas. In Seattle, a 10-bed unit for 30 patients, who use the facilities in turn, was $300,000. Royal Jubilee's first two machines cost $12,000 plus operational costs.

It is reported, however, that some of the newer home machines in use in the U.S. can now be bought for as little as $1,300 and operated for $4,500 a year.

Dr. Ballam says experience with home dialysis in Canada has shown unit costs to be closer to $3,000 with up to $5,000 annual operation cost—which is still considerably cheaper than hospital treatment.

No one can yet say whether the BCHIS investigation would result in the province assuming all these costs.

It is known that not every person afflicted with loss of kidney functions could take treatment at home. Some spouses of patients are not psychologically equipped to assist.

Some homes lack necessary environment. Experts estimate about a third of the individuals who require the treatment could be suitably treated at home.

Even then, no home treatment scheme could operate unless backed up by a hospital service to oversee the procedure and ward against infections and other problems which could affect a patient.

All that can be said for certain now is that a study is being made. And local hospitals are anxious to co-operate in initial attempts at home dialysis by training patients in the use of the equipment.

In Church on Salt Spring Island

SUSAN TOWNLEY MARRIED

A wedding of wide interest to Victorians took place in St. Mary's Anglican Church at Fulford Harbor, Salt Spring Island this afternoon when Susan Carol Townley became the bride of James MacGill Talman.

Entering the church on the arm of her father, the bride was lovely in a gown of ivory satin which she had made herself. Styled on empire lines, it featured a bodice of Alencon lace with sleeves softly belled at the elbow. A pearl and crystal coronet held her cathedral veil of nylon net. As a jewelry accent she wore a strand of pearls, gift of the groom, and a "something old" token was her grandmother's lace handkerchief. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses.

Autumn flowers decorated the church when Rev. Dr. R. B. Horsefield heard vows uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Townley of Fulford Harbor and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gavin Carrick, who flew from Glasgow, Scotland for the service.

Mrs. C. E. Abbott was organist, accompanying the congregation who sang "O Perfect Love" and "Lead Us, Heavenly Father, Lead Us."

Miss Janet Baker was bridesmaid, wearing a gown of jade green chiffon over satin styled on similar lines to the bride's. She had a toning chiffon headpiece and carried a cascade bouquet of bronze chrysanthemums.

Wendy Lou Horel was flower girl in a yellow nylon dress with matching headband. She carried a nosegay of yellow and bronze chrysanthemums.

Gordon Simpson acted as best man for his cousin. Jerry Penner, Vancouver, and Larry Townley, the bride's brother, ushered the guests.

Streamers, bells and flowers in pink and white decorated the home of the bride's parents for the reception. A two-tier wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom and flanked by vases of pink dahlias, centred the head table. Charles Horel proposed the toast to the bride.

For travelling on honeymoon to the provincial interior the bride chose a rust wool suit which she accented with beige accessories and toning chrysanthemum corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Talman will make their home on Rainbow Road at Ganges.

Richardson-Casilio Vows

Marlene Annette Casilio wore a satin gown and coat en train styled on empire lines when she became the bride of Douglas Ewan Richardson in Emmanuel Baptist Church. The gown featured a lace collar and a front panel of lace, complemented by the lace panel highlighting the train which swept back from the shoulders of the coat. A headpiece of crystals and white satin leaves held her tiered illusion veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink rose buds and white carnations.

Rev. N. Archer officiated at the double-ring service uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Casilio, 1150 Union Road, and the son of Mrs. H. Richardson, 500 Broadway Street. Mr. Casilio gave his daughter in marriage.

Baskets of pink and white chrysanthemums and dahlias were at the altar and pink petunias with white ribbons were on the pews. Mr. R. Pluym was organist, accompanying the soloist Miss Annette Casilio, the bride's aunt.

The maid of honor, Miss Marilyn Hall; bridesmaid, Lynda Allison and flower girl Cheryl Bateman wore matching gowns of flamingo pink peau d'elegance topped with nylon chiffon overskirts en tone. The Misses Pat Blyth, Patti Casilio, the bride's sister, and Carol Condon were also bridesmaids, wearing similar gowns in petal pink. Toning rosette headpieces held their short tiered veils and they carried cascade bouquets of flamingo and petal pink carnations.

Dave Richardson acted as best man for his brother and Mike Pierce, Don Snyder, Larry Johnston and Bob Richardson, the groom's brother, ushered the guests. Douglas Hall was ring-bearer.

Guests travelled from Alberta, Seattle, Tacoma, Vancouver, New Westminster, Powell River, Campbell River and Nanaimo to attend the service.

At the reception following in the Empress Hotel a four-tier wedding cake which was made by the groom's mother, centred the head table. Pink and white flowers decorated the room.

For travelling on honeymoon to Oregon the new Mrs. Richardson chose a pink wool dress and coat ensemble with pink accessories.

Sees Spiritual Separatism On Recent Trip to India

A need to revise the image of India in the eyes of the rest of the world was stressed by Mrs. J. S. de Villiers when she spoke at a meeting of the University Women's Club of Victoria.

"Even Indians themselves feel acutely sensitive to and perturbed by foreign reaction to poverty in India."

Mrs. de Villiers described a trip to India which she made with her husband, illustrating her talk with slides which showed the beauty of the country and its buildings. She described the people as "friendly and courteous to a fault."

Separatism was also part of the picture. "In Kashmir, the home of millions of Muslims, we encountered a form of spiritial separatism from the rest of India."

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. P. R. A. Coombs and thanked by Mrs. Frances E. Barker.

Receiving members, new members and guests were president Mrs. J. W. McCammon and past president Mrs. R. A. Fraser.

Introduced as new members by first vice-president Miss Margaret Lowe were Mrs. H. D. Armstrong, Mrs. J. B. Fraser, Mrs. Velma L. Gooch, Mrs. H. Grayson-Smith, Miss E. A. Hastie, Mrs. James E. Hendrickson, Mrs. W. A. Jones, Mrs. I. D. Parker, Miss Elizabeth Utting, Mrs. G. W. Wagner, Mrs. E. R. Walker and Mrs. R. T. D. Wickenden.

Social arrangements and refreshments were made by Mrs. A. B. Hall, Mrs. J. E. N. Flanagan, Mrs. J. M. Kennaird, Mrs. G. E. Simmons and Mrs. J. R. Stone.

The second style is a plain one-piece dress with contrasting color around the neck, sleeves, hem and forming stripes on the low buckled belt . . . Comes in pink and navy, green and yellow, brown and orange, blue and green and red and green . . . sizes small, medium and large . . . We understand this knitwear is terrifically comfortable to wear . . . and is very popular in the east . . . not only among the high school and college crowd, but with smart young housewives, too! . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

California Charmer chose a scene from "The Sheik" at the Movieland Wax Museum for this shot of a sunny yellow dress in rippled pique, cut in tiers and iced in contrasting pink bands. Rudolph Valentino would have found this little number impossible to resist.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Quality as a Man Is What Counts

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am still haunted by a letter in your column from a mother. She was irritated because strangers would stop her on the street when she was with her three little daughters, and invariably comment on "That gorgeous-headed child!" This was done in the presence of all the little girls, and that mother was justifiably provoked.

Not all mothers are that wise. Some show favoritism among their own children. In my husband's family, for instance, my husband went into business and his brother chose the priesthood. They have pictures of their son, the priest, in every room of their home. Not one of my husband! And how they brag about their son, the priest.

People would think they had only the one son. My husband, who is equally fine, rates not one word. His success in business is due to "pull" or "lucky breaks." Never hard work. Thanks, Abby, it helped to get this off my chest.

KOKOMO

DEAR KOKOMO: A priest or a nun, in most Catholic families, is regarded as a special contribution to the life of the church. A business man, by comparison, is commonplace. Don't stew about it. His quality as a man is what counts—to himself, to you, and to society, even if not to his family.

DEAR ABBY: I am 23, tall, slim, and attractive. I recently became engaged to J who is 25. We've gone together two years. J was married at 20. His parents forced him into marriage with a pregnant girl who claimed he was the father. He was able to disprove it and got a divorce.

Three weeks ago J told me that his father had noticed some "stretch marks" on my upper legs while I was sun-bathing around their new pool, and J was told that I should get medical proof that I had never had a baby!

I consulted my family doctor, who was furious, but wrote a letter to state that I had never had a child. I presented the letter to J and his parents.

J apologized, and asked me to go through with wedding plans. I agreed on the conditions that I would not have anything more to do with his parents.

Shortly afterwards, J said he was short of money and wanted to wait a year before marrying me. He has a good job, and a nice bank account, but he lives at home and his parents handle all his financial affairs. I told him that inasmuch as all my wedding plans had been made, I would not wait. His only comment was, "When you change your mind, call me." Nice, eh? What would you do?

BEEN HAD

DEAR BEEN: Shower him with silence. And send up a silent prayer of thanks for having been spared from a marital disaster.

DEAR ABBY: Tell "HANGING ON" to keep hanging on. My husband also ran round on me. He even asked for a divorce, saying he was "in love" with another woman and wanted to marry her. My friends, family, and even my lawyer told me I was a fool to hang on to him, that I should give him a divorce, but I just couldn't because I loved him. And besides, we had four children.

Now I'm glad I hung on because something happened and now he is a changed man. He became a born-again Christian through Billy Graham's crusade on television one night. All he did was walk up to the television set and say, "I want a new heart. I want to be forgiven for my sins and accept Jesus Christ as my Lord and Master."

Now I couldn't ask for a better husband.

Youthful Beauty

From the early twenties, bedtime massage with a vitalizing night cream is ideal for softening traces of surface skin dryness and tiny lines. Apply Olay vitalizing night cream to cheeks, forehead, and throat and coax it into the skin with light, upward moulding strokes, then remove with a tissue. Such care will encourage complexion loveliness.

CABLEVISION

In Step With Style By Nona Damaske

BUILT-IN HEATING PADS

The Times' fashion editor, Nona Damaske, is currently in California to attend fashion previews of styles that will hit the headlines in spring and summer 1968. Here are some of her impressions.

Damaske

LOS ANGELES—California's Fashion Creators' 17th annual national press week "blasted off" at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles this week. Ninety-four fashion editors, the largest attendance ever, were spirited into the year 1997.

The show, "Born Thirty Years Too Soon," a gay lighthearted look into the future was commentated by humorist Pat Buttram, well-known to television fans as "Mr. Haney" of CBS's "Green Acres".

Wardrobes of the future will shimmer and shine as gold, silver and coppertoned fabrics go swimming, skiing and dancing.

"His and Her" ski outfits with built-in adjustable heating pads and a wedding dress which goes through the wringer and comes out fresh, ready for the next ceremony, were two way-out fashions designed by California designers participating in Press Week.

THE SPORTS STORY

Monday morning the serious side of Press Week looked to the immediate future as the Sportswear Story unfolded.

Charm of Hollywood and California Charmer ask the question: "What are Pretty Girls Made Of?" and answer with . . .

"Flowers and dots, plaids and stripes,

"Laces and crochets, and everything nice."

This inexpensive, crisp, colorful collection is aimed at the college and young working girl.

The softly gathered dirndl skirt appears in many moods . . . falling from a high empire bodice . . . dropping from a hip-level band or at this season's newest spot . . . the natural waistline.

The blouson look, much admired by the woman with a less-than-perfect figure found its way into a clever green and orange half-dollar dot pant dress.

"Skrompers" are all-in-one rompers with a wrap-around skirt The romper tops are fashioned in the manner of a man's shirt . . . a fun, young fashion. Sam Bretzfield, president of International Set and Collage commentated his show in his own witty manner. Mr. Bretzfield is also the president of the California Fashion Creators group and is thought of with great affection by every writer attending press week.

SUIT ALL AGES

The Collage collection has a young-in-heart feeling but keeps the over-25 woman very much in mind.

Pant dresses are taking the big play away from the straight pant suit. Pants are by no means "out" but the pant dress is the big NOW news. Collage uses powder blue linen for a fetching belted gaucho jacket and pant culotte outfit. Vest or weskit-type tops appeared again and again as did the man-tailored shirt.

International Set likes the sensibility of Kodel and cotton for today's quickly-moving young woman. Completely washable and taking to brilliant dyes like a duck takes to water, this fabric captured a large portion of the International Set designs.

A fully pleated mini dress was shown four ways . . . over Jamaicas . . . over classic full-length pants . . . over a straight skirt and as a dress alone. Sam Bretzfield admits length is the industry's greatest problem at the moment. California is keeping her fashions short . . . but how short is a matter of great conjecture.

SPOTLIGHT ON BPW GROUP'S ACHIEVEMENTS

Business Women's Week Begins This Sunday

By PAT DUFOUR

Heroines make headlines. But, it's the woman who does her job every day, and does it well, that contributes the most lasting contribution to her community.

Business Women's Week, sponsored by the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Club, begins on Sunday. And, for one week only, the heroines must step aside and make way for their sisters.

Locally, Business Women's Week will be handled by the Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club, beginning with a breakfast in the Crystal Ballroom of the Empress Hotel, to be followed by a church parade at 10:30 a.m. in Metropolitan United Church.

Miss Louise Card—national BPW president

BPW members would be the last people to consider themselves outstanding. Yet, over the years, the organization has proved itself a spearhead for improving the lot of women everywhere. In a message to the 6,000 members, national president Miss Louis Card reminds them of some of their many projects:

"Equal pay and opportunities of employment for men and women.

"Projects to aid older women to obtain and hold employment.

"Vocational training facilities and counselling services for older women.

"Briefs presented on federal estate tax acts, income tax act and Canada Plan Pension act, where they indicate discrimination against women."

One current BPW program sponsors educational seminars which emphasize personal development through career achievement, leadership training and community development. The program is to be expanded to include guidance for young career women leaving high school and university.

Not nation-bound, the federation also supports United Nations' projects, particularly the activities and recommendations of the U.N. commission on the status of women, human rights, and also UNESCO, UNICEF and UNWRA.

Typical of these dedicated women is the Victoria branch's president, Mrs. Barbara Miskiman, an instructor with the provincial government's department of education.

She, together with Miss Dorothy Thompson, are responsible for 195 Grade 8 students who take their schooling by correspondence. Mrs. Miskiman teaches them English, social studies, science and health guidance. Her classroom is world-wide, reaching outside British Columbia to countries where B.C. children continue their schooling through her guidance.

These children include one whose parents are travelling in Hungary, missionaries' children in Venezuela and Japan, the daughter of a civil engineer in Chile and a child whose father is a UN official in Syria.

NORTHERN TRAPLINE

Two of her more interesting students are a sister and brother, whose father is a hunter 40 miles north of Vanderhoof. The children take turns accompanying their father when he checks the long trapline, each trip taking a week. The week each one stays behind in the cabin is spent catching up on their studies.

Other students of Mrs. Miskiman's 'class' live in lighthouses, are confined at home in wheelchairs or are trying to regain normalcy in the confines of correctional institutions.

Mrs. Miskiman taught school for 25 years before she entered the ranks of the provincial government department. Brought up in Alberta, she trained at the Teachers' Training College in Camrose. After leaving Alberta, she taught at Port Alice, points on the north end of Vancouver Island, and Courtenay before coming to Victoria six years ago.

BEGAN EARLY

She began her profession early, receiving her first assignment when she was 17.

"It was a farming community, 100 miles north of Edmonton, right out in the woods. I walked 3½ miles to school each day. I was in sole charge, my students were 11 negroes and 10 white children. It was a wonderful challenge."

It is this same spirit of challenge that motivates Mrs. Miskiman and her fellow members in their search for a better world for all women. The spirit is catching. At Sunday's breakfast, representatives of other groups will join them in the annual observance.

In addition to members from the Oak Bay and Sidney BPW Clubs, there'll be women from the Association of Women Electors, Beta Sigma Phi Council, University Women's Altrusa, Credit Women's Breakfast and Soroptimist clubs. Rev. E. Laura Butler will be a special guest.

Miss Katherine Youdall, a BPW member who has recently returned home after a lengthy stint as a teacher in newly-emerging lands, will speak on "The Problems of Underprivileged Countries."

Unlike many celebrations, Business Women's Week will be a sober and quiet observance, bereft of ballyhoo. This is the way BPW members like it, being "ordinary women" with extra-ordinary degrees of commitment to others.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Novel Trivettes Will Add Verve to Table

By PENNY SAVER

This week was the time I'd chosen to go through cupboards and see what needed to be replaced. I have known for some time I would have to replace some of my hot-plates but in my usual style, have been avoiding the issue for as long as possible. The quilted ones I was given about five years ago for Christmas were beginning to show the wear and tear and needed replacing soon. I was thinking about having a casserole for supper and I had my doubts if the old hot-plates would be thick enough. Today seemed as good a day as any to replenish my supplies.

The answer to the hot-plate problem is the wooden trivettes I've found. These are made out of wooden rings, held together with metal locks. Each is about three-quarters of an inch thick and large enough to hold a casserole dish or coffee pot. They come in a variety of vivid blues, greens, oranges and reds and there is a color for every taste and color scheme. I couldn't resist bringing home a green one to be used at Christmas. They're priced at a very reasonable $2.45.

Other items to catch my eye were some beautifully turned wooden egg cups. They come in a range of vivid colors and there is a shade to suit every taste or decor. It you like green there is a bright green for Christmas, if blue is your favorite color you can get either royal blue or turquoise, and if you want red the red is clear and bright. I could not resist bringing about four home for immediate family use because the colors are so eye-catching. They sell for $1.25.

For decorations that are different "hippy flowers" are the thing you want. A hippy flower is a five-petalled paper daisy with a long wire stem that can be wound about anything that suits your fancy. They come in a wide range of brilliant colors to suit every taste and there are two different sizes to choose from. A package of about 10 flowers costs 95 cents.

If you would like to know where I found these items give me a call at 382-3131.

Port Coquitlam Home For Couple Wed Here

A floor-length gown of lace fashioned with seed pearls starring the bodice was worn by Linda Rose Mahaffy when she became the bride of Daryl Andrew Schmitz in Wilkinson Road United Church. The sleeves of the gown ended in lily points and organza roses highlighted the back of the skirt. A single fabric rose headpiece held her bouffant cathedral veil and she carried a colonial bouquet of red roses and white carnations.

Chrysanthemums and gladioli decorated the church when Rev. H. Whitmore officiated at the service uniting the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray L. Mahaffy, 1176 Dunsterville Road, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo L. Schmitz of Port Coquitlam who travelled to Victoria for the service. Mr. Mahaffy gave his daughter in marriage.

David Boon was organist. He played the "Bridal Chorus" as the wedding party entered the church and Lohengrin's "Wedding March" as the recessional.

Miss Edith Boon was maid of honor and Miss Debra Smith, cousin of the bride, was junior bridesmaid. They wore matching gowns of pink chiffon over taffeta, styled on empire lines and appliqued with pink and green roses. Single chiffon rose headpieces held their bouffant veils and they carried colonial bouquets of white chrysanthemums.

Little Jackie Steer was flower girl, wearing a gown of lime green hand-embroidered taffeta with a self-fabric headband. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink chrysanthemums. As a jewelry accent she wore a locket, gift of the bride.

Steve Smith, the bride's cousin, acted as ring-bearer.

Richard Reiber was best man and John Mahaffy, the bride's brother, and Jim Reiber, cousin of the groom, ushered the guests.

At the reception following in the Strawberry Vale Hall, a three-tier wedding cake, made by the bride's aunt, Mrs. C. Shillito, centred the head table. Gordon Rutledge proposed the toast to the bride. Bill Smith, the bride's uncle, acted as master of ceremonies.

For travelling on their honeymoon to Saskatchewan the bride donned a pink wool three-piece suit, accented with pink and white accessories. Red roses and white carnations en corsage completed her costume.

The newlyweds will make their home in Port Coquitlam.

Halloween Fair At St. Savior's

St. Savior's Anglican Church will hold a Halloween Fair on Saturday, Oct. 28, from 2 to 4:30 p.m. in the church hall. Rev. F. W. Wheeler, 90-year-old honorable assistant priest for the parish, will open the affair. He has worked with the church since his retirement to Victoria in 1949.

There will be stalls of home-cooking, aprons, delicatessen, plants, fruits and vegetables and there will be a cake walk. Tea will be served and a door prize is offered.

Pansies Mark Pews At Recent Service

Baskets of gold and white chrysanthemums were at the altar and mauve pansies marked the pews when Muriel Louise Wichko became the bride of Garry William Adamson in First United Church.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace styled with lily point sleeves, complemented by a full cathedral veil that misted from a pillbox headpiece. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink and white rosebuds.

Rev. R. J. D. Morris officiated at the service uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Egnatz Wichko, 3116 Steele Street, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Handgraaf, 752 Newbury Street.

Miss Linda Brown was maid of honor, wearing a dark pink fuchsia gown and carrying a cascade bouquet of purple asters. Miss Leona Cozens was bridesmaid in a gown of pale pink peau de soie with pink asters forming her bouquet.

Little Donna Seginowich was flower girl for her cousin, wearing a gown of pale blue nylon and lace.

Douglas Adamson acted as best man for his brother and Steven Bishop and Ken Black ushered the guests.

At the reception following in the Dominion Hall, a wedding cake, flanked by arrangements of white daisies, centred the head table. Baskets of pink and white chrysanthemums decorated the room. Fred A. Setterington proposed the toast to the bride.

Guests travelling from out-of-town for the service included Mr. and Mrs. W. Allan, Mr. and Mrs. S. Shillito, Mr. and Mrs. D. Price, Mr. and Mrs. B. Reilly and Mr. and Mrs. R. McNeil.

For travelling on honeymoon to the United States the new Mrs. Adamson, chose a turquoise suit which she accented with black patent accessories.

STAMP CORNER

By REG. NAIRNE

On Oct. 24 the United Nations will issue 6c and 13c stamps in common design in the interest of Disarmament.

The stamps feature the text "They shall beat their swords into ploughshares," and were designed by Ole Hamann of Denmark. The printing was done by the photogravure process by H. Fournier of Spain.

●

Another 6c value and a miniature sheet will follow on Nov. 17, and will illustrate two of Marc Chagall's stained-glass UN memorial windows.

The sheet, judging from a diagram, will be rouletted into six irregular rectangles, each of which can be used as a 6c stamp.

(As Chagall's designs are more or less abstract, it will probably not seem to the layman to make much difference where the separations in the sheet occur!)

The single 6c stamp reproduces the panel from the upper middle window known as the "Kiss of Peace".

●

The opening of Stanley Gibbons branch in New York has resulted in two excellent new additions to our philatelic literature.

One of these is the American edition of the Part 1 catalogue,, which includes all the information to be found in its English counterpart (including the section on British stamps used abroad); with the addition of an excellent listing of U.S. and UN issues.

Prices have all been converted into U.S. currency, of course.

The other publication is the Gibbons Whitman Stamp Monthly, which is an intelligently edited high class magazine, which carefully avoids being boringly technical.

It is handsomely printed and includes several colored plates which add greatly to the interest.

It also contains the same monthly supplements to the catalogue which are to be found in Gibbons English edition.

●

The International Bureau of the UPU will publish early in 1968 a new edition of the List of Post Offices of the World, numbering some 420,000 in all. The list will run to 2,000 pages divided into three volumes.

It would be useful if our Public Library had a copy, and would certainly be welcomed by local philatelists.

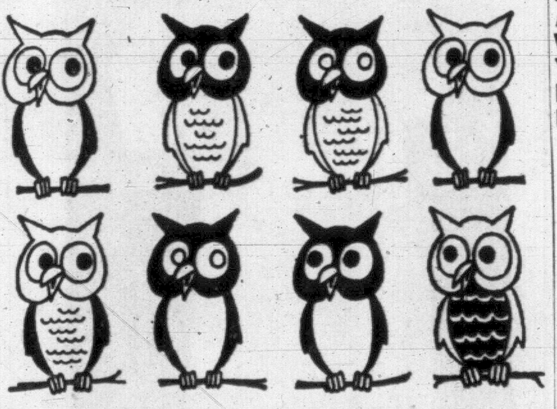
SMART GALLERY



A fine eightsome of owls you see below. All are doing something they're not supposed to do. Well, nobody's perfect. But perfect or imperfect, two of the lot are twins. How quickly can you point out the duplicate pair and also tell what's wrong with the whole hootin' match?

Answer: Twins are at top left and top right. Digression is that owls are pictured rolling their eyes in sideward glances an action owls are not equipped by nature to do. To glance to its side an owl must turn its head.

SOUNDING YOU OUT

Nine sounds associated with human speech are contained in the words below. Simply cross out letters in each so that a "sound word" remains. In number 1, for instance, cross out "le" and the word "sing" remains. Take it from there.

1. Single.
2. Stalk.
3. Humid.
4. Clutter.
5. Callous.
6. Invoice.
7. Bespeak.
8. Shady.
9. Crockery.

Answers: 1, sing; 2, talk; 3, hum; 4, utter; 5, call; 6, voice; 7, speak; 8, say; 9, cry.

KWICKIE KWIZZER

Said Ben, "I am thinking of a number which is twice as large as the number which is 4 more than one-third of the one I have in mind." Of what number is Ben thinking?

Answer: The second number mentioned is one-third of the first and 4 more: this number is ½ of the one of which Ben thinks; 2 times the second is two-thirds of Ben's number and 8; 8 being one-third, the number is 24.

MAGIC WORDS

Warn someone that the trick you are about to perform has to do with magic words. Have your victim join you in sitting on the floor and tell him that he will now be unable to rise by himself until you are willing that he should. He'll scoff, of course, but when he tries to get up, you do, too.

TAKE A WALK

A group of hikers set out for a destination seventy-two miles distant. Stops were decided on at certain distances along the way. To make things interesting, the leader designated completion of these distances as stops:

1. The middle third of the first third of the last half of the hike.
2. The last third of the first half of the last half of the trip.
3. The first third of the second third of the first half of the total distance.
4. The last third of the first half of the first half of the trip.
5. The middle third of the first half of the last quarter of the hike.
6. The first quarter of the second half of the last third of the trip.

How far was each stop?

Solution: The distance of the various stops from the starting point are 44 miles, 54 miles, 16 miles, 18 miles, 60 miles and 63 miles, respectively.

EMPLOY TRICK NUMBERS

It is quite possible, after inviting somebody to think of a number, to determine it.

Tell him to add 1 to three times the number he has in mind and multiply the sum by 3. Then he is to add to this the number thought of, subtract 3 and tell you the remainder.

The remainder is always ten times the number he selected. For instance, suppose 4 was selected. Four multiplied by 3 plus 1 makes 13. Then 13, multiplied by 3 equals 39, and 39 plus 4 makes 43. Subtract 3 and divide the remainder by 10 and you have the number he thought of.

QUICK-QUIZ

Spot the intruders in this group:

Starry, shell, saddle, second, corral, sherry, stucco, school.

Answer: Shell has only five letters. Second had no double letter.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Good players are usually lucky. Most of the time they make their own luck but sometimes the gods of chance really smile on them.

After 44 boards of the championship match North America held a 12 International Match Points lead. The Italians picked up 14 match points on Board 45 to take a lead and from that point never looked back. They might well have won if this hand had gone against them but we will never know. We do know that we can't assess blame against Alvin Roth and Bill Root because they played three no-trump from the South seat while d'Alelio and Pabis-Ticci of Italy played it from the North.

Opening lead—♥6

The Roth-Root bidding is shown here. Roth didn't have to bid one no-trump over the spade overcall. The Italian South bid two diamonds and made it possible for his partner to play the no-trump game.

Roth liked the heart lead. West had bid two hearts. He should hold the king. He played low from the dummy and the hand collapsed. East took his king and led back the ten. Roth tried the diamond finesse and when it lost he went down four losing six hearts, a diamond and a club.

We also are not going to fault Roth for ducking the first heart. He could not have known he could have made the hand by rising with dummy's ace of hearts at trick one. Then he would lose the diamond finesse. West would be in with the diamond but the heart suit would be blocked forever provided Roth followed up his clairvoyant start by playing the clubs in such manner that West would not be able to get on lead with his ten.

WET, WINDY

Woeful Weekend Weather

It is going to be a wet and windy weekend, weatherman Allan McQuarrie said today.

A half-inch of rain was dumped on the city overnight but was expected to slacken by late afternoon. Showers are forecast and winds will gust up to 35 mph.

The wind will decrease overnight and Sunday morning should be fair but an approaching storm is expected to reach this area by evening, bringing with it more rain and heavy winds.

At one point this morning a gust of 47 miles per hour was recorded. The rain overnight measured three inches at places on the west coast of the Island.

Up to noon today, 4.39 inches of rain had been recorded at Victoria so far this month, almost three times the normal rainfall. But at Tofino, on the west coast, 22.15 inches of rain have been recorded this month.

CROWD GATHERS as anti-war assembly began today in Washington, D.C., opposite the Lincoln Memorial. In the background is the reflecting pool and the base of the Washington Monument. About 100,000 demonstrators were expected and police and troops were set for trouble.—(AP Wirephoto)

Thousands March To Ring Pentagon

WASHINGTON (AP)—Thousands of youthful anti-war demonstrators marched on the Pentagon today after hearing attacks on President Johnson and his Vietnam policy.

Benjamin Stock, pediatrician and author, labelled Johnson as "the enemy" at a huge pre-march rally at the Lincoln Memorial and protest leader David Dellinger said the American people are against the war.

Crowd estimates ranged from 20,000 by the District of Columbia police department to 37,000 by the National Capital Park Police to Dellinger's 150,000 to 210,000.

Most were college age, bearded and blue-jeaned, and they combined a carnival atmosphere with applause for the speeches before starting out on the 1½-mile walk to the defence department headquarters building across the Potomac River.

One brief melee upset the otherwise non-violent assembly.

Police, soldiers and other reinforcement units were on hand in heavy numbers to hold down any violence.

A pair of anti-demonstrators rushed through the crowd as the program got under way and charged the speakers' stand.

A youth wearing a black leather jacket knocked over the speaker's rostrum before demonstration leaders corralled him.

The speaker, British union leader Clive Jenkins, was knocked off his feet in the scuffle.

By 2 p.m. police arrested five persons—the two anti-demonstrators, a third who police said also made a rush on the speaker's stand, a demonstrator who tangled with them and a man protesting the rally who refused police admonitions to get out of the way when the program began.

Dellinger, 52, chairman of the sponsoring National Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam, told the crowd the peace movement had entered "a new stage of active resistance" and said "our voices will be heard and our bodies will be heeded."

•

By noon, police had taken four persons into custody. Two of those arrested were youths who rushed the speakers' stand. They were detained by police after one of them knocked over a microphone. Another was a demonstrator who had battled the pair.

A fourth man arrested was a uniformed, bemedaled serviceman who refused police orders to leave the memorial area where he was protesting the rally.

Dellinger said the Vietnam conflict was the most unpopular war in U.S. history and described President Johnson as a "martyr to principle who, damn it all, is going to go ahead with the war even if the American people are against it."

Dellinger announced an estimated 100,000 were present "with others still coming in." The two youths who stormed the speakers' stand ran from a point in the crowd where a student waved a sign saying "Go to hell with the Red clergy—let's start the fight against the Communist menace."

The youthful crowd—many long-haired and in casual clothes—surrounded the reflecting pool in front of the memorial and extended as far back as the slopes at the foot of the Washington Monument.

The sponsors of the demonstration—a confederation of peace and anti-war groups ranging from the radical left to groups of housewives—mounted their security line around the speakers' area, keeping it clear of demonstrators.

Protests Sound Around World

By UPI

Hundreds of thousands of anti-Vietnam war demonstrators marched and chanted in European and Asian cities today in a day of international solidarity with the huge Washington rally protesting U.S. policy in Southeast Asia.

U.S. embassies and other American installations abroad were key targets of many leftist marchers.

Some of the biggest demonstrations took place in Japan where the national police agency said a total of 200,000 persons participated in marches and rallies in 367 localities throughout the nation.

An estimated 60,000 union members staged a big anti-war rally in Tokyo where about 3,000 leftists marched around the U.S. embassy, shouting "Yankee, go home." Police arrested 11 of the Tokyo demonstrators.

In Europe leftist-led demonstrations hit London, Paris, Dublin, Stockholm, Oslo, Amsterdam, Frankfurt, Moscow, Berlin and Munich. Smaller demonstrations were reported elsewhere in Europe.

In one of Western Europe's biggest shows of anti-American strength, 20,000 Frenchmen and a handful of Americans and Vietnamese marched to the Place de la Republique—a traditional site of May Day demonstrations in Paris.

Trains Rolling to Expo As Transit Strike Over

MONTREAL (CP) — Subway trains began rolling to Expo 67 at 12:45 p.m. EDT today, heralding the first big break in Montreal's month-long transit strike.

A spokesman for the Confederation of National Trade Unions, which represents the strikers said the unions would not place anything in the way of subway and bus crews returning to work.

"The law is the law," he said referring to the legislation passed in Quebec City early today ordering the 6,000 employees of the Montreal Transportation Commission back to work.

An Expo operations officer said the first subway train began dropping its passengers at the St. Helen's Island station within the world's fair at 12:45 p.m.

He expected that buses would be running an hour or so later to Expo. Buses on other routes in the city began running, at about 12:40 p.m.

For Expo, the break came like a happy ending to a drawn-out cliff hanger. Officials had been prepared to cope with possibly the worst congestion yet seen in this final full weekend of the world exposition.

NEEDED SERVICE

The reported break came two days after Philippe de Gaspe Beaubien, Expo operations chief, told a press conference that all Expo needs to reach an attendance of 50,000,000 visitors is the restoration of subway service.

Service on the two other subway lines was expected to resume later in the day. The MTC had said it would give top priority to restoration of service on the line connecting downtown Montreal to Expo and the south shore of the St. Lawrence River.

Unions Fail To Mount Big Protest

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Quebec Bureau

QUEBEC CITY — The confederation of National Trade Unions failed Friday in an attempt to mount a massive demonstration against a bill ordering striking Montreal bus drivers back to work.

The bill became law early today, giving Montreal Transportation Commission employees 48 hours to go back to work or face prison terms, stiff fines and possible decertification of their unions.

The Liberal opposition voted against the bill after the government defeated an amendment that would have eliminated clauses threatening unions with loss of certification if their members defy the law.

BARRICADES ERECTED

More than 300 provincial police officers were on duty at the legislature Friday and barricades were set up to hold back the promised thousands of demonstrators, that the CNTU had announced would march on the legislature.

Barely 1,000 militants showed up Friday evening.

And although a handful of them periodically chanted "revolution," the farthest they got in that direction was an unsuccessful attempt to burn down two young trees.

A few liquor bottles were thrown, after being emptied, over the heads of the police cordon that held the demonstrators back from the legislature doors.

When a handful of the more militant members of the demonstration proposed invading the legislature, CNTU president Marcel Pepin called his followers away to a meeting in the Quebec Coliseum.

That meeting was cut short after the gasoline tank of a policeman's motorcycle was set alight outside the Coliseum.

LEGISLATION AVERTED

Radiologists Back

QUEBEC (CP) — Last-minute agreement was reached Friday between the provincial government and Quebec's radiologists averting planned legislation to force the X-ray specialists back to work.

Premier Daniel Johnson said the radiologists had told him they would return to the hospitals "with or without contract."

The government had planned to introduce a back-to-work bill in a special session that also was called to deal with the Montreal transit strike.

There are 208 registered radiologists in the province and they began resigning in early August in protest over government attitudes to the extension of hospital insurance coverage to private clinics.

The radiologists and the provincial health department clashed over the amount of control the department should have in private radiology clinics receiving public money.

In his Friday statement the premier said agreement now has been reached that only welfare cases will be eligible for coverage in private clinics under the hospital insurance act.

They Now Can Enjoy Good Book

The chance to sit back and enjoy a good book—whether a novel or a history book—is something blind persons don't always have.

The chance to enjoy the book with someone else is an even rarer pleasure. But a few persons with a few dollars to spare can put a reader in a blind person's home.

The reader—a cartridge-loaded tape machine—is one of many Canadian National Institute for the Blind services partially supported by the United Appeal.

The CNIB received 4.7 per cent of donations to the Appeal last year.

The book readers—each of which costs the CNIB $150 to place on permanent loan in a home—is only one of the many services provided.

Jack Hoskins, who took over as field representative of the Vancouver Island district of the CNIB a month ago, says there are about 475 blind persons in the district to look after.

The CNIB offers them everything from home training in handicrafts to placement in jobs.

A home teacher goes on regular visits to 40 persons in Victoria to offer instruction in reading Braille, typing, basketry, knitting and other crafts.

They are supplied with materials at cost and the CNIB sells what they make from its building in Victoria and through stores in the city.

And their activities never end—Mr. Hoskins said he is always after new ways to employ the blind.

HER LAST TICKET

Mrs. Prestwich of Calgary who won $150,000 said that's the last sweepstake ticket she'll ever buy.

"Lightning never strikes twice in the same place," she said, "we will let somebody else win next time."

Arthur Savery, 39, of Lunenburg, N.S., was fishing off the Newfoundland coast today when it was announced he had won $150,000.

He was aboard a scallop dragger and owners of the boat tried to make contact to tell him of his win.

Lake Victim Identified

The search continued today for the body of a Nanaimo youth who drowned Thursday.

He was one of four who died in Tetachuck Lake, 90 miles southwest of Vanderhoof.

He has been identified as David Heathcote, 19, of Cedar Road, Nanaimo. The other victims were Harold Arrand, 48, of Prince George, his wife Edith, 32, and their two-year-old daughter, Darlene.

David had been working since spring at a lodge on Tetachuk Lake.

Police said the four lost their lives when their 22-foot boat overturned. The lone survivor was Al Smith of Fort St. John.

Secret Talks Open On Rhodesian Crisis

PRETORIA (Reuters) — Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith flew here today for secret talks on the Rhodesian independence crisis with Prime Minister John Vorster of South Africa.

The two leaders were due to confer later today at Vorster's official home in Pretoria.

Smith's flight provided the first direct evidence that South Africa is going to play a front-rank role in trying to settle the Rhodesian-British dispute.

The meeting lent strength to suggestions in diplomatic quarters here that the South African government has been asked by Britain to try to persuade the Rhodesians to come to terms.

South African Foreign Minister Hilgard Müller met British Prime Minister Wilson and Foreign Secretary George Brown during a recent visit to London.

SANITY TESTS URGED FOR LEADERS

Long Trips a Danger?

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters)——An Australian doctor has suggested that the World Psychiatric Association form a committee to check the mental health of world leaders.

Dr. Oscar Schmalzbach, psychiatric consultant to the New South Wales attorney-general's department, made the suggestion in a letter to the Medical Journal of Australia.

He said that politicians who attended top-level conferences after long, wearying flights could endanger world peace.

Politicians flown to conferences to meet international emergencies were not given time to readjust their mental and physical equilibrium, he said.

"This may be one of the reasons, probably an important one, for the sad state of world affairs," Dr. Schmalzbach said.

Today or any day, you may observe this tableau at one or other of our Victoria service stations.

A shiny new Williwaw Eight is suckling at one side of the gas-pump island. On the other, a Widget Six has finished taking on fuel. Its windshield is clean, its oil, radiator and battery have been checked, and you in your car astern wait for the lady driver to roll on her way. So does the new pump jockey whom the operator was forced to add to his payroll last month.

The lady, however, has produced a wad of tickets or slips from the glove compartment, and is checking them against another token of the same sort.

Her tally concluded, she says petulantly to the attendant, "I just don't believe there are any winners!" Then, at last, she shoves off.

If you haven't already departed in your hardtop Huff for another station — where the scene may be repeated — you are now free to take on fuel, while grumbling over time wasted by a nuisancy gimmick.

This is the money "giveaway," a game of chance that rewards a few gas purchasers with sums that range from one dollar up to a small fortune. And it may surprise you to learn that many if not most of the service station operators stuck with it are growling about it too.

★

One dealer I talked to hauled out a carton half full of little envelopes, each containing a ticket with a number combination.

"Everyone thinks we're suppled with these by the oil companies," he told me. "But it doesn't work that way. We're required to buy them."

Like the vast majority of dealers, this man leases his station from the oil company whose products he sells. In consequence — and whether rightly or wrongly — he feels that he is compelled to go along with its promotions. There is also the necessity of keeping up with his competition.

So he signs for give-away tickets at a cost to him of from two to five cents apiece. The carton he showed me had cost him $20; it is his fifth, and he does not propose to order more unless or until a new money draw is launched.

Ostensibly, the oil company pays off the winners. The dealer's view, however, is that he finances the prizes and in fact the entire campaign by his purchase of tickets from the company.

Its effect, I learned, has been to produce a class of "floater" customers. These follow the current campaign through its run, then switch to the new gamble with which the rival dealer down the road has just been saddled.

★

"Sure," said another I talked to, "while a giveaway campaign lasts, we sell more gas. But our profit from it never balances the cost of the extra help we're required to hire. It doesn't bring us more shopwork, either. The oil companies may gain from it, but we don't. One way or another, we lose."

One of his competitors agreed that the giveaways leave the dealer's pocket lighter rather than heavier, and also cost him goodwill.

"People don't like not to win, and only a tiny fraction of our customers are going to. A lot of gas buyers get irritated when they fail to hit a lucky combination. Women are specially given to complainings."

All were convinced that the woman driver provides the worst giveaway headache.

Comments: "A man may not ask for a ticket but a woman always will" . . . "Women are rotten losers. If they don't hit a winner, they often get nasty."

I don't like the money giveaways myself (partly because they never won me a nickel) and am inclined to agree with the dealer who calls them "a cancer on what used to be a good, straight business."

This I expect they will remain until, with their customers backing them, our service station operators unite in a loud firm "No!" against further lotteries based on gasoline purchase.

Passersby Spot Smoke; Awake Pair

Two youths, returning home from a dance early this morning, noticed smoke coming from the living room at 718 Kings, turned in the fire alarm and aroused two sleeping boys.

Gary Wakeham, 15, of 1137 Bewdley, and his friend, Frank Chidley, 18, of Duncan, used the alarm box at Douglas and Bay. They then awoke Benny Jack, 16, of 718 Kings, and his friend, Charles Webster, 15, of 2528 Rose, who was staying at the house.

A fire department official said the smoke was coming from a smouldering chesterfield cushion and that it could have become a serious fire but for the action of the passing boys.

UNITED FISHERMEN

Group Reapplies For Affiliation

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Labor Reporter

The United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union has re-applied to the Canadian Labour Congress for affiliation.

The move was made this week and confirmed Friday by union president Steve Stavenes of Vancouver.

The 8,000-member Canadian union applied 10 years ago to join the CLC but the national labor congress did not act on the bid.

Mr. Stavenes said this was the reason for the re-application.

"Maybe a fresh approach will bring it more to the attention of the CLC, rather than waiting for them acting on a 10-year-old application," he said.

NEVER AN AFFILIATE

The UFAWU, formed in 1945 from a merger of two earlier unions, was never a CLC affiliate.

It was affiliated with the old Trades and Labour Congress of Canada but was expelled in 1954 because of alleged Communist leadership.

Commenting on the re-application, regional CLC vice-president E. T. Staley of Victoria said he personally welcomes any move by unaffiliated unions to join "so long as they are willing to abide by the constitution and policies of the congress.

"If they are willing to make themselves acceptable the CLC will take them in."

One section of the CLC constitution states that any organization "controlled or dominated by Communists, Fascists or other totalitarians or whose policies and activities are consistently directed toward the achievement of the program or purpose of the Communist party, any Fascist organization or other totalitarian movement shall not be permitted as affiliates of this congress."

'OPINION OF SOME'

Asked if the UFAWU is considered Communist-dominated, Mr. Staley said that is "the opinion of some in the CLC. This applies to more than the fishermen's union."

RAIN-SLICKED STREETS BLAMED

Eight Injured in Mishaps

Eight persons were taken to hospital Friday following accidents on rain-slicked city and district streets.

City police have investigated 17 accidents since noon Friday and Saanich police handled 13 accidents between 4 p.m. Friday and midnight.

Taken to hospital, treated and discharged were:

Joseph Scuby, 4545 Duart, and Eva McDonagh, 532 Dallas Road, in a collision on the University of Victoria campus at 5 p.m.

Mrs. Percival Rogers, 3213 Kingsley, in a crash at Caledonia and Blanshard about 8 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. David Waters and their daughter, of 1693 Warren Gardens, in a rear-end collision at Bay and Rose shortly after 9:30 p.m.

Jolan Csizmarm, 1304 Rudlin, in a crash at Johnson and Store Streets about 7:30 p.m.

Mark Walezak, 341 Dupplin, in a collision at the corner of Bay and Quadra just after noon.

Grinding Crash Killed Father As Son Watched

By DON DINGWALL

A 35-year-old Duncan man crashed to his death in a car Friday night while his 10-year-old son watched from a car behind.

Dead is William Louis Hille, of Telegraph Road, Cobble Hill.

Mr. Hille was on his way home from work when his car was in collision with a pickup truck coming in the opposite direction.

There was a grinding head-on collision at the Allenby Road intersection with the Trans Canada Highway, less than a mile south of Duncan.

Driver of the truck was John Grocott, 50, of Chesterfield Street, Duncan. He is in satisfactory condition today in hospital.

Municipal firemen led by Chief Pat Clackson worked frantically to free Hille's body from the wreckage.

His feet were pinned under the car's pedals.

A family friend had driven his son, Billy, in to meet his father at his Jubilee Street barber shop. Billy stayed in the friend's car for the return trip and they were only a few car lengths behind when the accident happened.

Mr. Hille came to Duncan two years ago from Ocean Falls.

A close friend, Bill Metz, said, "He was a quiet man who, except for bowling two nights a week, lived for his family."

Mr. Hille is survived by the widow, Olive, son Billy and two daughters, Cindy and Diane.

Law Clerk Seeks Seat In Oak Bay

Ian Horne, QC, deputy law clerk to the B.C. Legislature and a lifelong resident of Oak Bay, will run for election to Oak Bay council Dec. 9.

Mr. Horne and Jack Rhodes, a resident of Oak Bay since 1964, have declared for the incomplete terms of Couns. Fred Hawes and Douglas Watts, who are resigning to run for the reeveship.

The three incumbents—Couns. Frances Elford, Walter Dodsworth and W. J. J. Wade—have indicated they will stand for office again.

Reeve Allan Cox will retire at the end of the year.

PARENTS LEAN ON CHILDREN

'Alarming' Evidence Found In Psychologist's Survey

Children doing the best they can in school almost all feel they should be doing better.

Close to 200 adults turned up at a seminar dealing with pressures on children this morning to hear a panel of specialists probe the influences bombarding children at home, in school and from the community.

Child psychologist Andrew Mikita told them the preliminary results from a survey of 300 children in kindergarten, grades 1 and 2 showed this "alarming" evidence.

- 97 per cent of the youngsters felt they were doing as well as they could in school.
- 94 per cent felt they should be doing better — but they didn't know why.
- 90 per cent of the children said their parents expected more of them.

"It seems that parents, with their pressures, need children so they can work out their own problems."

When children behave, parents can then "feel good," said Mr. Mikita. In this way parents can sometimes become dependent on their children.

People that are pressuring children are usually not aware they are doing so and can usually produce reasons when it's pointed out to them.

The day-long workshop is being presented by the Island branch of the Association for Childhood Education in co-operation with the Institute for Adult Studies.

Other panel members are Dr. Robert Harper, director and head of the Behavioral Sciences Foundation at Simon Fraser University; Dr. Richard Martin of the University of Victoria's philosophy department and Ray Wunderlich, teacher and former president of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

PORTABLE, CHEAP TO BUY . . . . . . BUT COSTS STILL HIGH

Kidney Cleaning Machine for Home Studied by BCHIS

By PETE LOUDON

A plan to extend artificial kidney treatment to patients in their homes is under study by the provincial health department.

The scheme, utilizing cheap, portable units, could greatly ease an anticipated demand for units now in service at Royal Jubilee Hospital here and at Vancouver.

But B.C. Hospital Insurance Service consultant Dr. Charles Ballam warns various obstacles remain to be overcome.

So far, although new portable equipment shows a great deal of promise, no small machine has obtained the stamp of safety in Canada. And costs are still high.

Home "dialysis" is possible now and is being undertaken in Montreal and Seattle with the same equipment used at present in hospitals, but not on a general basis.

In these areas, patients who a few years ago would have died are leading almost normal lives, attending work and school, despite loss of kidney function.

On regular occasions these patients connect tubes protruding from their circulatory systems with tubes in a machine which filters and launders the blood.

One Seattle girl does her homework while the cleansing process continues.

"It's being studied and at the request of the provincial government the B.C. Medical Association set up an advisory committee. It is exploring the medical feasibility," said Dr. Ballam.

His comments followed a speech by Dr. Peter Banks of Victoria, who outlined the anticipated problem of doctors in deciding who shall have the use of existing hospital units, and who shall not, as demand increases.

In this province 35 to 50 new patients will require dialysis this year. Patients will require continued use of the machines. A five-year case load would require facilities for up to 200 patients.

At present, the facilities here are treating nine. Both Victoria and Vancouver hospitals hope to constantly add to their hospital kidney treatment plants and Trail and Kamloops are providing new units, but a dramatic increase in cases is anticipated.

Costs of hospital units and their operations have proved staggering in some areas. In Seattle, a 10-bed unit for 30 patients, who use the facilities in turn, was $300,000. Royal Jubilee's first two machines cost $12,000 plus operational costs.

It is reported, however, that some of the newer home machines in use in the U.S. can now be bought for as little as $1,300 and operated for $4,500 a year.

Dr. Ballam says experience with home dialysis in Canada has shown unit costs to be closer to $3,000 with up to $5,000 annual operation cost—which is still considerably cheaper than hospital treatment.

No one can yet say whether the BCHIS investigation would result in the province assuming all these costs.

It is known that not every person afflicted with loss of kidney functions could take treatment at home. Some spouses of patients are not psychologically equipped to assist.

Some homes lack necessary environment. Experts estimate about a third of the individuals who require the treatment could be suitably treated at home.

Even then, no home treatment scheme could operate unless backed up by a hospital service to oversee the procedure and ward against infections and other problems which could affect a patient.

All that can be said for certain now is that a study is being made. And local hospitals are anxious to co-operate in initial attempts at home dialysis by training patients in the use of the equipment.

Thousands March To Ring Pentagon

WASHINGTON (AP)—Thousands of youthful anti-war demonstrators marched on the Pentagon today after hearing attacks on President Johnson and his Vietnam policy.

Benjamin Spock, pediatrician and author, labelled Johnson as "the enemy" at a huge pre-march rally at the Lincoln Memorial and protest leader David Dellinger said the American people are against the war.

Crowd estimates ranged from 20,000 by the District of Columbia police department to 37,000 by the National Capital Park Police to Dellinger's 150,000 to 210,000.

Most were college age, bearded and blue-jeaned, and they combined a carnival atmosphere with applause for the speeches before starting out on the 1½-mile walk to the defence department headquarters building across the Potomac River.

One brief melee upset the otherwise non-violent assembly.

Police, soldiers and other reinforcement units were on hand in heavy numbers to hold down any violence.

A pair of anti-demonstrators rushed through the crowd as the program got under way and charged the speakers' stand.

A youth wearing a black leather jacket knocked over the speaker's rostrum before demonstration leaders corralled him.

The speaker, British union leader Clive Jenkins, was knocked off his feet in the scuffle.

By 2 p.m. police arrested five persons—the two anti-demonstrators, a third who police said also made a rush on the speaker's stand, a demonstrator who tangled with them and a man protesting the rally who refused police admonitions to get out of the way when the program began.

Dellinger, 52, chairman of the sponsoring National Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam, told the crowd the peace movement had entered "a new stage of active resistance" and said "our voices will be heard and our bodies will be heeded."

•

By noon, police had taken four persons into custody. Two of those arrested were the youths who rushed the speakers' stand. They were detained by police after one of them knocked over a microphone. Another was a demonstrator who had battled the pair.

A fourth man arrested was a uniformed, bemedaled serviceman who refused police orders to leave the memorial area where he was protesting the rally.

Dellinger said the Vietnam conflict was the most unpopular war in U.S. history and described President Johnson as a "martyr to principle who, damn it all, is going to go ahead with the war even if the American people are against it."

Dellinger announced an estimated 100,000 were present "with others still coming in." The two youths who stormed the speakers' stand ran from a point in the crowd where a student waved a sign saying "Go to hell with the Red clergy—let's start the fight against the Communist menace."

The youthful crowd—many long-haired and in casual clothes—surrounded the reflecting pool in front of the memorial and extended as far back as the slopes at the foot of the Washington Monument.

The sponsors of the demonstration—a confederation of peace and anti-war groups ranging from the radical left to groups of housewives—mounted their security line around the speakers' area, keeping it clear of demonstrators.

Protests Sound Around World

By UPI

Hundreds of thousands of anti-Vietnam war demonstrators marched and chanted in European and Asian cities today in a day of international solidarity with the huge Washington rally protesting U.S. policy in Southeast Asia.

U.S embassies and other American installations abroad were key targets of many leftist marchers.

Some of the biggest demonstrations took place in Japan where the national police agency said a total of 200,000 persons participated in marches and rallies in 367 localities throughout the nation.

An estimated 60,000 union members staged a big anti-war rally in Tokyo where about 3,000 leftists marched around the U.S. embassy, shouting "Yankee, go home." Police arrested 11 of the Tokyo demonstrators.

In Europe leftist-led demonstrations hit London, Paris, Dublin, Stockholm, Oslo, Amsterdam, Frankfurt, Moscow, Berlin and Munich. Smaller demonstrations were reported elsewhere in Europe.

In one of Western Europe's biggest shows of anti-American strength, 20,000 Frenchmen and a handful of Americans and Vietnamese marched to the Place de la Republique—a traditional site of May Day demonstrations in Paris.

Trains Rolling to Expo As Transit Strike Over

MONTREAL (CP) — Subway trains began rolling to Expo 67 at 12:45 p.m. EDT today, heralding the first big break in Montreal's month-long transit strike.

A spokesman for the Confederation of National Trade Unions, which represents the strikers said the unions would not place anything in the way of subway and bus crews returning to work.

"The law is the law," he said referring to the legislation passed in Quebec City early today ordering the 6,000 employees of the Montreal Transportation Commission back to work.

An Expo operations offjcer said the first subway train began dropping its passengers at the St. Helen's Island station within the world's fair at 12:45 p.m.

He expected that buses would be running an hour or so later to Expo. Buses on other routes in the city began running at about 12:40 p.m.

For Expo, the break came like a happy ending to a drawn-out cliff hanger. Officials had been prepared to cope with possibly the worst congestion yet seen in this final full weekend of the world exposition.

NEEDED SERVICE

The reported break came two days after Philippe de Gaspe Beaubien, Expo operations chief, told a press conference that all Expo needs to reach an attendance of 50,000,000 visitors is the restoration of subway service.

Service on the two other subway lines was expected to resume later in the day. The MTC had said it would give top priority to restoration of service on the line connecting downtown Montreal to Expo and the south shore of the St. Lawrence River.

LEGISLATION AVERTED

Radiologists Back

QUEBEC (CP) — Last-minute agreement was reached Friday between the provincial government and Quebec's radiologists averting planned legislation to force the X-ray specialists back to work.

Premier Daniel Johnson said the radiologists had told him they would return to the hospitals "with or without contract."

The government had planned to introduce a back-to-work bill in a special session that also was called to deal with the Montreal transit strike.

There are 208 registered radiologists in the province and they began resigning in early August in protest over government attitudes to the extension of hospital insurance coverage to private clinics.

The radiologists and the provincial health department clashed over the amount of control the department should have in private radiology clinics receiving public money.

In his Friday statement the premier said agreement now has been reached that only welfare cases will be eligible for coverage in private clinics under the hospital insurance act.

Unions Fail To Mount Big Protest

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Quebec Bureau

QUEBEC CITY — The confederation of National Trade Unions failed Friday in an attempt to mount a massive demonstration against a bill ordering striking Montreal bus drivers back to work.

The bill became law early today, giving Montreal Transportation Commission employees 48 hours to go back to work or face prison terms, stiff fines and possible decertification of their unions.

The Liberal opposition voted against the bill after the government defeated an amendment that would have eliminated clauses threatening unions with loss of certification if their members defy the law.

BARRICADES ERECTED

More than 300 provincial police officers were on duty at the legislature Friday and barricades were set up to hold back the promised thousands of demonstrators that the CNTU had announced would march on the legislature.

Barely 1,000 militants showed up Friday evening.

And although a handful of them periodically chanted "revolution," the farthest they get in that direction was an unsuccessful attempt to burn down two young trees.

A few liquor bottles were thrown, after being emptied, over the heads of the police cordon that held the demonstrators back from the legislature doors.

When a handful of the more militant members of the demonstration proposed invading the legislature, CNTU president Marcel Pepin called his followers away to a meeting in the Quebec Coliseum.

That meeting was cut short after the gasoline tank of a policeman's motorcycle was set alight outside the Coliseum.

They Now Can Enjoy Good Book

The chance to sit back and enjoy a good book—whether a novel or a history book—is something blind persons don't always have.

The chance to enjoy the book with someone else is an even rarer pleasure. But a few persons with a few dollars to spare can put a reader in a blind person's home.

The reader—a cartridge-loaded tape machine—is one of many Canadian National Institute for the Blind services partially supported by the United Appeal.

The CNIB received 4.7 per cent of donations to the Appeal last year.

The book readers—each of which costs the CNIB $150 to place on permanent loan in a home—is only one of the many services provided.

Jack Hoskins, who took over as field representative of the Vancouver Island district of the CNIB a month ago, says there are about 475 blind persons in the district to look after.

The CNIB offers them everything from home training in handicrafts to placement in jobs.

A home teacher goes on regular visits to 40 persons in Victoria to offer instruction in reading Braille, typing, basketry, knitting and other crafts.

They are supplied with materials at cost and the CNIB sells what they make from its building in Victoria and through stores in the city.

And their activities never end—Mr. Hoskins said he is always after new ways to employ the blind.

Secret Talks Open On Rhodesian Crisis

PRETORIA (Reuters) — Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith flew here today for secret talks on the Rhodesian independence crisis with Prime Minister John Vorster of South Africa.

The two leaders were due to confer later today at Vorster's official home in Pretoria.

Smith's flight provided the first direct evidence that South Africa is going to play a front-rank role in trying to settle the Rhodesian-British dispute.

The meeting lent strength to suggestions in diplomatic quarters here that the South African government has been asked by Britain to try to persuade the Rhodesians to come to terms.

South African Foreign Minister Hilgard Muller met British Prime Minister Wilson and Foreign Secretary George Brown during a recent visit to London.

SANITY TESTS URGED FOR LEADERS

Long Trips a Danger?

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters)——An Australian doctor has suggested that the World Psychiatric Association form a committee to check the mental health of world leaders.

Dr. Oscar Schmalzbach, psychiatric consultant to the New South Wales attorney-general's department, made the suggestion in a letter to the Medical Journal of Australia.

He said that politicians who attended top-level conferences after long, wearying flights could endanger world peace.

Politicians flown to conferences to meet international emergencies were not given time to readjust their mental and physical equilibrium, he said.

"This may be one of the reasons, probably an important one, for the sad state of world affairs," Dr. Schmalzbach said.

Anti-War Marchers Halted by Bayonets

Bid to Storm Pentagon Fails

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Anti-war demonstrators sought to storm the doors of the Pentagon today but were turned back by civilian U.S. marshals, backed up by grim-faced soldiers with fixed bayonets.

The clash took place in front of the main mall entrance to the huge building, which is the nerve centre of U.S. defences. Several demonstrators, including novelist Norman Mailer, were arrested.

The demonstrators seemed to lose heart for the attempt to force an entry when the U.S. marshals guarding the door began wielding their nightsticks, and a platoon of soldiers with bayonetted rifles arrived at double-time to take up a second line of defence behind the marshals.

The soldiers stood in riot formation about 50 yards beyond the point at which the demonstrators were testing the determination of the marshals—and finding it firm. There was no direct confrontation between the troops and the demonstrators.

The outbreak of violence took place shortly after 4 p.m. Prior to that time, the biggest anti-war rally in the capital's history had gone off in orderly fashion.

Benjamin Spock, pediatrician and author, labelled Johnson as "the enemy" at a huge pre-march rally at the Lincoln Memorial and protest leader David Dellinger said the American people are against the war.

Crowd estimates ranged from 20,000 by the District of Columbia police department to 37,000 by the National Capital Park Police to Dellinger's 150,000 to 210,000.
